Dear Ones;

The things you sent are just lovely. And I appreciate it all the more because I know it means something to spend a lot of money for one thing for me when there are a lot of things that you need yourselves too. I'm not going to say I wish you hadn't sent the shoes for they are a perfect fit and so pretty! I do have a sort of guilty feeling though to have such nice ones,—I mean, such expensive ones when you have been having sickness and other things to make it hard.

I am so anxious to have one of the girls hem my tablecloth; I'm going to have her hem it on two sides or all around, I don't yet know which. Even tho' it is not a pattern cloth it will look something like one if it has hemstitching all the way around. I haven't written to the Washburn people but I must do that the very next thing. I am going to tell them to send white spool sewing cotton sizes 36 to 50, and fine tatting cotton in pretty colors; also Sharp and Crewel needles, crochet hooks, tatting shuttles, little work bags, combs, tooth pastes, and tooth brushes, towels or wash cloths, pencile, erasers, tablets or note books. I don't mean I am going to tell them to send all these things, but it is like the list that I sent you, they may have a wide variety. I shall tell them other things too when I get to writing, probably.

And now let me tell you some things that I would love to have you buy with some of my money. Forty copies ($2.00 worth) of the leaflet Just Girls, that I am enclosing. I am sending it to a good many people. I would also like a twelve yard piece of some val . edging to put on the embroidered white dress that I had last commencement time. I have decided that that is what the dress needs to make it becoming to me. It is too plain an effect as it is. Filet lace would be too heavy, and that is the only kind I can buy here usually.

What bold thing do you suppose I have dared to do? I have written six letters to as many different people, informing them that I am sending them tatting to sell. I am sending you one of them to see. Will you read it and then pass it on, and then tell me what you think of it; whether it was going too far to presume that folks would be tickled to death to do this little stunt. You may faint when I tell you to whom I am sending the other five letters; Gladys Lyman, Mrs. Speed, Mrs. Gammon, Lillian Carson, and Bessie Pierce. You may have $60.00 worth of tatting coming to you, you see; but I really have faith to believe that you won't!

I am sending Baby Ruth some things, and I am sending them to you so that there should be any duty you can pay it out of MY MONEY, without fail, and ON NO ACCOUNT out of YOURS!

Did you say something once upon a time about sending out some seeds for dandelion greens? I seem to remember that you did but haven't had any of the greens to eat yet and so I can't remember whether you really did see anything or not. It sounds good to me anyway!

Had a Xmas card from Emily H. Cobear, on her way to the Philippines where Prof. O. has the chair of Physics in the U. of the Philippines. She wants me to write a request is a big concession, it seems to me, when I have never even answered her wedding announcement! Don't you think so? Marion Boss, the new girl who just arrived last week for Chaochowfu, to take Ruth Sperry's place, was on the Steamer from Shanghai down to Manila with Emily. She found out that she was a Colby girl and so spoke of her when I said that Colby was my college. I am going to write. The same day that Miss Boss came, Miss Marjorie Fleming of Swatow, I mean for the work in Swatow city, came. She will live in Swatow city, with the Speichers on the other side of the bay from us. She will have all sorts of things to do in the new institutional church.
The Mr. Ling about whom you sent the clipping, happens to be the very one that helped me so much just when I was getting ready for my last exam, a little more than a year ago now. I never should have done so well on that old history, if it hadn't been for his splendid help. He had just finished his work at Nanking University, and had come down here to teach in the Academy. It was before his school began that he helped me. I do know his Mother, and she is one of the Bible women with whom I went on that very first country trip. I know his father too; and his young sister just came up this year from our primary school into the regular school.

Very lovingly yours,

Abbie
Dear People:

Sunday night here and Sunday morning there, we are just at the close of God's day, and you are just at the beginning of it. This is the one line in all the rest, I believe, when I most often think of you. It is a real inspiration to see you all getting ready for the Church services and the Young People's and all. We have had our busy fall, happy days, and you are all ready for yours.

"As you watch the sun rising in the east
While the glowing colors flood the sky,
"As you think that perhaps across the sea
The first light may have shone on me?"
"Then I watch the sun and see you...
It shines on us both for a minute or two,--
"And the smiles of sun beam in you and me They seem so small."

"But all the day and the long night too
When there are hills or clouds hang gray,
"There is never a moment when God above
Be not watching o'er us with tender love.
"And I look to Him and see you and me
"In cares for us both the long years through,--
"At the side of sea hearth, you and me
"Goes none at all!"

aren't these verses beautiful? One of my fellow workers got here a dear girl who lives with me, wrote to her mother. I'm sure you will be happy to share these too.

I have seen a good many busy days and struggled with not a few puzzling problems since I wrote my last letters to you. Miss Colley went home in June as she had planned, and after a good summer's rest in the hills, I have plunged again into the work for which I have been preparing these two years. I have been confronted with some situations which were difficult, and constantly there is a little fear lest some carelessness of mine or my inexperience may do something to harm the work. Yet I feel, too, that His is the hand that is leading me, and if I can only learn to trust Him more fully, His own work will surely prosper.

On the 1st and 2nd of this month we celebrated the Sixtieth Anniversary of the opening of the South China mission. We did surely have what the Chinese would call a "in-just"—which means "a lot of people together having a good time"? Only a certain number of delegates from each school were present at all the sessions and our chapel was filled with guests from inland stations. We had speeches from American guests; Dr. Adams of the Rochester Theological Seminary, and missionaries returning to their work in other parts of China, as well as missionaries who came from their fields especially to help us celebrate. These speeches were given in English, and translated into the Seates dialect. Some of our own missionaries gave addresses in Chinese, after having given a brief summary of their talks in English for the benefit of the Western guests. In the devotional services the Chinese pastors took turns with the missionaries. But two of the finest, most stirring talks we had were by two of our college graduates. These can have a far vision of what the Chinese church must be if progress in the future is to be rapid and real. They believe thoroughly, and preach forcefully, the gospel of a church which shall not be dependent upon the money, the energy, the Christianity, of the foreigner. We are proud of their spirit.

On Thursday afternoon the residents in the port of Seates were invited to a tea to meet the Eastern visitors; and on Friday afternoon the schoolmates, both Chinese and foreign, enjoyed a tour of the school in the compound. The Academy boys exhibited the apparatus they use in their science courses, along with some of the work of their Health Protection Club—such as model houses, model kitchens, canvass and waterproof walls (all in miniature). They greeted us with thrilling band music; then I heard several speeches and Chinese string instrument music. The kindergarten kids were nothing short of captivating as they gave their little exercises and acted a little story, on the English lines. Last of all, the visitors were able to hear our girls sing. I wish you might have heard them. It is more than worth any number of discouragements to hear these sweet voices singing "My Lord", "O come to my heart, Lord Jesus", "Yes as a bird to your mountain, "Seater as the days go by", "We shall see the King some day", and others.

Saturday morning was the grand parade in Seates city. Our girls and the primary and the kindergartens—boys' schools from Lityang and Chanyang and even as far inland as Ana—The Western School and the theological seminary and our boys' Academy were all there; the whole parade made an imposing procession of over twelve hundred people. The bright banners made gorgeous splashes of color in the crowded streets, and the various school bands bade their drum and tested their horns, demonstrating their enthusiasm by a joyful noise, though some critical bystanders thought they needed more. The Chinese have processions, and this grand display seemed a most fitting climax to the biggest event in sixty years.

Our 164 girls send you warmest greetings. The daily getting to know them better, especially the ones who are in my classes in Old Testament History, Music, and Beginners English. We are very sorry that our third year class of high school work could not be opened this year on account of insufficient teaching staff. The girls are desiring for this year and we must begin it next year. Will you pray that the right teachers may be found and the way be opened?

I want to thank you for the letters you dear Arvostock people have written to me and the things some of you have sent me at different times. I wish I might write each of you a personal letter. I want to tell the Bridgewater girls again how much I do appreciate the splendid boxes they sent, some of these things will make Christmas happier for the girls this year. And thank you all for your prayer and loving interest. That, I know, is what carries us over a good many hard places out here!

Yours in the Master's service,

Abbie J. Sanderson

Dear [Name],

will you forgive me if I don't write you a letter this week? All I have done this evening is to write these two letters—one to [Recipient] and the other to Mr. Giberson. I'll send them to you and let you pass them on.

It is quarter of eleven this minute and I must get to bed to make up some sleep. I'm quite well straightened around after my cold and digestive upset, etc. I have decided that I must be careful and continue to be careful about what I eat.

05 Jan [Year] Much love to [Recipient] of my two dears, ginger, candied 4 cp. of [Abbie].
No. 119

Dear Aunt Mother Mine:

This is the fortieth letter since last Tuesday. I started to say it was the fortieth that I had finished, but I haven't exactly finished it yet! And then I started to say that it was the fortieth I had begun - but I've begun more than that. I have letters already started to Uncle Arthur and to Miss Brigham which are not yet finished. To be accurate, then, I have finished forty-eight letters and mailed most of them. I have still a batch which I am here with sending to you to forward - please.

What do you think I have been doing this afternoon and evening? Reading over your old letters? I began it to look for the names of women you have spoken about - Mrs. Hothkiss and some others whom I ought to remember - and some others whom I ought to remember.

But I can't find it at all - and don't - and don't, if your please, give them word from me as you know I am thinking it is my heart.

Do you know I am thinking it is my heart? I know you can (!) and you have my full and free command - and permission as to do - so often when I am writing to you I am upstairs and your letter is downstairs - or vice versa -

Well in this process of reading over letters I have come across an appalling number of things that I can't remember answering at all. As her goes.

This address 2852 Indiana Ave. Columbus.

Her father is not very well—yes, her brother had gone to Ohio.

Did I tell you that Mabel Bowell has had a second hand experience since she has been ill with typhoid fever—and Mabel’s language study has stopped again while she has missed him. M. is more on her own.

We have a new British Consul and a new American—British Consul. Her name Major—she have heard me speak of her perhaps as being unwilling to sing in the choir. She is a concert singer. She is married. I think—name Adams—in married. I think.

Eva Soutette’s letters have been coming to the point—first she thought she loved this man—then she had letters from him—then, “Marie” then she had letters from him—then romance—well, quite else. She writes of her engagement—which is a dead secret. They will not be married for two or three years—

Tena Cushing has been studying with Miss Greenough at Harvard and they together have got their M. A. Will say that all the girls I left behind are getting an M. A. or a M. A. and had I’m not doing either. Sad!
The Chu Yin Tzu — or, that father was talking about is what we call the Tzu in — jie.
You see there is a slight resemblance — but not enough so that people speaking the different dialects can understand each other. There is a big movement on foot to spread the use of Mandarin all over China. You folks read about it long ago in the papers — and wondered, I suppose, why I was so silent about it — and the above mentioned phonetic alphabet. Well, the reason is this — it hadn't got down here yet. We had heard about it of course — but no one had done anything about it and no one took much interest more than to say "Oh! The!" (hard to do) in the phonetics through the victrola is a method that is being used in a good many schools. The students have decided to use the money the girls have raised to buy a Victrola. And we shall enjoy the music, too! You folks have heard me tell about making dresses out of old Chinese silk things that have been fumigated — I wonder if you would like to have me send you some if I Ever run across any more? Would Gladys like anything like that I see spoke -? It would almost invariably have to be combined in your next dress and I might be able to get a whole dress out of one.

You spoke of the quilt you were finishing last March - did you mean you would send it if it were finished or if I wanted it? For I never have too many and often want it. We have to borrow sometimes when we have guests. But if you need it yourself or if you have guests. I am sure 4. I need it - please don't send it. I am sure that I am much more fortunate and much better situated that I can use more in a good many ways that I could get along without...have you send me some things that I could get along without if you are needing them - any of you?

I think I have told you that the typewriter paper I have is fine - but when I make a lot of copies of things I like paper of this size that I can get it here and written on - not similar - I can get it here and written on. Mrs. Lamb's letter is now many - of the quality that paper however is not as good as this. If too much as I don't know how expensive it is - if too much as I don't know how expensive it is - if too much as I don't know how expensive it is. I will let you know and have you buy some for me.

Last week I came another bundle of Priscilla's and the needlecraft - will you please subscribe to the needlecraft with my money and then send it on. I will let you know and have you buy some for me. I am sure we could get helpful designs from it - as I almost always do from the Priscillas you send. I am as glad to get them, always...
This reminds me that I have wanted for some time to ask you if you want me to send you more attempts for Xmas presents - I'm sure you do - at least if in your place I'd love to have you send me more cards for next year - and would like to know whether tattlet is what you like best to give - or tassels - or some drawn work pieces (I haven't sent you much -) or writing paper - Of the things I have sent - what do you like best - or more fall of them?

Did I ever tell you that Mrs. Speicher wanted me to thank you for the picture roll she received from you? She told me long ago -

Did you get my letter saying that I'm interested in the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board - but I can't seem to find any material about it and if you can get the literature blanks, etc. I would be happy to see it to consider the matter.

My salary is $600.00 gold.

I have not heard from Mr. Johnston but have written to him and certainly think you ought to be hearing from him by now -

I don't quite understand whether that money from Miss H. Flandell was really mine or not.

I said something about putting it in the sewing machine fund - but said that I didn't know whether
In the picture of the reunion I have been wondering who the "other" people were. To Harold there--sitting in the front row?
Did I tell you that C. E. Ling was my teacher while I was preparing History for exam--and that I went on a country trip with his mother--yes--I'm sure I did.
The parables I sent were done by an old man up in Kityang--and are not used here except as interest in Kityang--and are not used here except as interesting and beautiful ornaments. I'm wondering if you received the other Yanco package I sent--I shall be pretty mad if you don't--for it had a mixture of things in it!
Haven't heard that Arthur received his letters.
People were so good to me--and I wrote to that Emily, and Margaret Wimih gave me Miss. Collin's porch Peggy--and Margaret Wimih gave me Miss. Collin's porch.

Clara Leach a white brass charcoal lamp warmer-- Pearl Mason (the girl I met at Kityang) the sweetest photo Of after dinner coffee cups--Miss Collin's a lovely picture of.
Ruth Whitman sent a pair of lovely plus white boots.

Lucile writes a lovely rose-colored silk tie. Edith laces a new book of songs—Ruth Taylor says that she and her father wanted to know what they might send me for Knorr worth about ten dollars. I told about things for the work that have just sent the letter—

Now these are all lovely things—don't you think I am a fortunate one? a lucky dog in other words? But now comes the fine one—I thought it—

The finest present I had was the shoes you mentioned in your last letter. It seems extravagant—indeed it is necessary. I have shoes that fit—and important & have to have shoes that fit—and important & have nice looking ones—white & have white silk necessary—no important & just grand. Mrs. Stacy sent me them.

The grand climax—in a sense is what you sent me. The grand climax—certainly is what you sent me. I shall feel frivolous & care free enough when I shall feel frivolous & care free enough when My scalp is pretty bad, but I have the woman wash my hair often and I'm always hoping that I'll get time to have it treated. I don't spend my time worrying about it the way I used to. The breast is perfectly all right; I have given up my medicine. I have no more trouble. The headaches are bothersome a little now. I have to be careful what little I do so that I don't overdo it. But they shoes I wear and how far I walk; but they shoes I wear and how far I walk, and I'm not limping as I usually did several weeks ago.

Now—this is a hot-gibble? But I've been scribbling for over an hour just as fast as I can. I have to get this done and I haven't tried to say things in any proper way, or arrangement. I'm going back to Kechkuch tomorrow and wanted to get this much done.

Love,

Your own,

Abbie
Dearest Ones:

Over two weeks since I wrote to you at all, and I am certainly ashamed. Every time I let such along time go I think I will never do it again but here I am. I wish you wouldn't spank me or something; anything, in fact, except punish me by not writing to me. That might be the proper form of chastisement but also the most cruel form.

When I wrote to you last it was the week before school and some of the girls had already come back. How would you like a few extracts from my diary since that date?

Feb. 25:

"Read a chapter in Mark and some from Epheians with Hiu-pi Che. Several new girls arrived. Old ones appearing. Tennis for the third day in succession, wonderful! Bought Ruth's curtains and wrote to Mother ordering more scrim.

Feb. 26:

"Welcomed new girls all day. In fact registered 12 for the dormitory when there was room for only six. I am a nut! Heng S.S. gently reminded me of what I had done! Packed and sent brown suit, blue sailor suit and blue voile to Shanghai for dyeing. Out for tennis for a fourth time. Met Mr. and Mrs. Angell.

Feb. 27:

"And still the new girls come. Went to Chinese church, then English, where Mr. Gamble preached. In P.M. Peggy and Margaret came over and we sang, then walked out to the point between my sessions with Heng $. $. and new pupils!"

Feb. 28:

"Began classes after a fashion. Busy all day talking with teachers or pupils. Emily arrived at noon from Kaying. Examinations in P.M. Still more new ones coming. Teacher's meeting in the evening. In P.M. to East hill with E.

Mar. 1:

"Another new pupil— one that I visited last winter with Miss Sollman and urged to come to school. In A.M. sent new pupils into classes and talked to the late comers, fining them each 50¢. Prepared & taught my Old Testament class. A short walk with E. Lu Sin-se came to discuss opening of new school at Hou-ie, Promised $25. On evening Girls' school prayer meeting, then Church music committee until 10.30.

Mar. 2:

"Arranged more classes for the new pupils. Deacon from Tat-hau-pou came to discuss the annual loan. Hong Lau's mother came to discuss opening a new girls' school at Kuang pou. Promised $15. 5 P.M. a meeting of educational com. at 6.30 Mr. Capen gave me his teachers' schedule. Skipped missionary prayer meeting to arrange schedule. Mr. Waters was here about twenty min. to talk over the Kuang-pou school. In bed about 1.30.

Mar. 3:

"Up at 6.30. Wrote notes to Tang and Lim Sin-se about schedule and sent for Lou Sin-se to come. Every minute busy till 12. To hospital to have throat painted. A half hour nap. At school from 2 until 4. Woman's prayer meeting. Calls from Mrs. Page, Enid, and Lou Sin-se. To bed early.

Mar. 4:

"Arranged new pupils' Arith. class. Set Hui-pi to work on schedule blanks. A long conference with Heng S.S. about Hui-siang (a girl who is very bright and wants to be promoted into the graduating class. Rec'd tuitions and planned work until 12. Studied O.T. Hist. until 5.30. At 5.45 choir practice. Mr. Barraclough walked home with us. Evening practiced for quartet on Sunday and had an hour of reading Dickens, Wordsworth, etc. at Capen's.

Mar. 5:

"At school at 8.30 to see if all the girls were doing their composition. Washed my hair. 5 new pupils arrived today. In P.M. Lou Sin-se and I settled final matters of the schedule, in evening told the other two men teachers about it. Huen S.S. is sick and has not yet arrived. I don't know what to do about it. Played a set and a half of tennis.

Mar. 6:

"Song in quartet.
Sang in quartet in Chinese Church. Mixed fudge and peppermint candy. Practiced chants, then to walk with the school girls (they are the same dear girls!) and then to Evensong service. In evening wrote to H.I.T. and wrapped up the romanized testaments he asked me to buy. (This is the Mr. Todd I met in Kuliang last summer. He has written to me several times since then. Don’t scent romance, please, there ain’t no such animal!)

Mar 7:

“Gave Chinese Lit. Exam to 3 new girls. Arranged Gym schedule for our 138 girls. Studied Hist lesson. To hospital for throat treatment. Taught my Hist. and Singing classes, had a pupil teachers’ meeting. Went over to East Hill with E."

Mar 8:

“Discussed gym and music classes with Sok-hiang. A lesson to the High School girls on their Easter song. Took accounts and made a new arrangement with Heng Sin-se-nie. To walk on Cemetery Hill with E. Waited so long for Heng Sin-se that I missed prayermeeting.

Mar 9:

“In P.M. went to Swatow to hunt for English books with Ruth. Went out to Mrs. Speicher’s to talk about Hui-cheng’s coming back to school. Just missed the union prayermeeting.

Mar 10:

“Arranged another makeup English class. Took blue thread to Hui liam for tatting, and yokes to Hong lau for repair. Sok-hiang led missionary meeting, topic: ‘Pundita Ramabai’. In P.M. got a-sim started on my purple dress (another concoction from old Chinese jackets!)

Mar 11:

“Usual work. Read Deborah’s Song with Hui-pi. A little talk with Mrs. Lim about dresses and hats for the H.S. girls. She doesn’t like the ugly little hats any better than I do. I hope there won’t be a tussle about it.

Mar 12:

“To Swatow with Tsu-gek (the contractor who is building our new house) to inspect the new Customs’ residences. The porcelain bathtubs are just wonderful! A new girl came for admission but had to turn her away because there is no room. Did a little sewing. Out for a game of tennis. Chinese eats eats with the Bungalow girls over at their house. We played dominoes and then danced. Miss Sollman had gone out into the country.”

Well! Is that a little history for you? I thought I would write you a letter after I got through with this, but that will have to wait now, and we’ll call this the letter this time! Don’t worry about my throat. I am going to the hospital for treatment partly because my catarrh has been bothering a little more than usual, which is not at all alarming, however, but mostly because so many of the girls have bad throats and I don’t want to run any careless risk of infection of any kind. An ounce of precaution, you know! I am in fine health, and doing my best to keep so. I know some people will think I am shirking if I get out for tennis a little more than some of them do, but I’ve decided it is right, and the Board is always harping that we must do more of that sort of thing, so I am going ahead as best as I know how. How’s that for you?

Very lovingly yours,

[Signature: Emily]
Dear Mother:

Only day before yesterday I sent my letter to you but I am beginning another to you so that you will be more likely to get one inside of a shorter period than two weeks. Maybe if I hurry you will get this on the same mail with no. 121, though that is not the ideal way to get them, I know. I can't any more than begin this, for it is twenty minutes past eight now, and chapel is at half past. I have a good many things to do today:

Look after a sick girl (malaria)
Finish up an exhibit of pictures and work to send home to the Board
Work on accounts and get them finished up Correct a pile of Old Testament History papers in Chinese

11.45 P.M.

I wanted to come upstairs to work and as am writing this with pen - I had to leave this morning before I finished of my list - I have been at it all day and there is an report of how I have succeeded.

The sick girl is better - I have seen her twice today and she looks a hundred percent better than yesterday. We are very glad, of course, and much relieved.

The exhibit I haven't touched, and Miss Sellman wants it sure pop by tomorrow!

The accounts are all finished - Hooray! These should have been in last conference time but just then I had to wait to hear from the Hong Kong Bank before I could be sure about a certain deposit, as I didn't hurry about getting them all finished. After conference there was a rush of other things and no chance to have accounts audited, so I didn't feel in a rush to get everything cleared up.

But Mary came over today and she and Mr. Page will audit them tomorrow A.M. I stayed at home from the girls' prayer meeting tonight to fix them. Once I thought I was in a terrible mess for I couldn't possibly reckon straight. But it came out all right and I feel free as can be!

I spent the morning correcting papers. Have one set corrected and another set begun. The first part of the evening I expected to work on accounts. I spent talking over a troublesome school situation. The whole thing is cleared up now, and I need not have spent five minutes, but the mother of the teacher involved must tell me a lot of unimportant details and as the minute sped by.

Yesterday afternoon Emily and I discovered that two doors and a window were wrong in the second story of our new house. And the second story wall is already built nearly halfway. So last evening and all day today I tried to get hold of the contractor. He came about 5:30 P.M. and will fix the doors all right.

It is after 9:30 now and I must ship it bed, and I shall be a dumb sleepyhead tomorrow.

Yours with love

Abbie

Wed. Mar. 16 - 10:40 P.M.

Did not get this letter sent yet after all. Thought yesterday was a busy day, but today was more full than yesterday. After chapel corrected some more papers, read over a passage which I intend to use in leading tomorrow's chapel talk [with teacher], found sick girl rose and sent for her mother - sent her to the hospital. She has malaria and also mumps. The room in which she is sleeping is used for a classroom all the time and you can imagine how convenient it is to have nurses come and give exam. However, all classes of twenty or more are reciting not ten feet away from the bed! Are we crowded?!!

Mary came and audited my accounts & now they are on their way to New York. I spent an hour in the 3:30. About seven in P.M. getting school exhibit finished up. That is gone now too! From two until nearly five I spent having a preliminary examination with the help of Mr. H., and then calling in their homes. Each girl and asking for Baptism, and then calling in their homes.

As for the girls who are asking for Baptism, I visited the sick girl again. Kakueli down by the stream. I asked permission etc. I visited the sick girl again and then came home and changed. We were entertained by Mrs. Page for supper, and then came home and changed and started a committee to arrange the meeting. Had program meeting with Associate Mrs. Ratto, Mr. and Mrs. Page, Miss Solomon, and Mr. Page and Miss. - Five little
Dear Ones:

It is now ten minutes of eight in the morning. I want to tell you what we are thinking about these days and then you will know more in detail how we need your prayers, and will feel as though China is not so very far away after all!

Dingley May, the Chinese evangelist, is here in the interests of the Chinese Student Volunteer Movement, and I thought that it would be a splendid opportunity for the girls to hear him. So I have invited him to spare us a little time and he has promised to come to us some time today. But he asked us to prepare for his little talk by special prayer. Last night I had Heng Sin-se-nie tell the girls about it and ask them to pray especially that the girls' hearts might be softened to hear what he has to say. We expected him to come this morning at eight thirty, but I have just found that he will not come to us until P.M.

Last night about 5.30,- I was getting ready for a little game of tennis,—and a delegation of rather small girls came to see me. I thought they had come to fuss about being in the same class in English with some girls who had not studied as long as they had, but that wasn't it at all ! They came to ask whether they could join the church. I was delighted, of course, thought I knew that most of them, probably, were not yet ready for that step. The meeting before the church committee comes tomorrow, and so we had to hurry to get our work done. We plan not to let any of the girls go before the comm. until we are convinced that they are ready. This saves a great deal of unnecessary trouble, as you certainly must know. So Miss Ang and I had the girls come to us last evening and examined them enough to find out that they will all do much better to wait a short time at least. Doctrinal questions are asked at the examinations, they tell me, and our little girlies are vague indeed in their ideas on such things. Miss Ang has two classes every week of a nature to remedy this difficulty; one is an inquirer's class where the girls who have not yet decided to be Christian come to ask their questions, and the other is more for the purpose of ferreting out questions of doctrine and getting the girls who have decided a bit more firmly grounded in the faith. The two girls who were examined on Wednesday were found to be "easily provoked to anger" and so we have asked them to wait a little until they are more sure of themselves.

Yesterday P.M. Margaret Winn led the missionary prayer meeting and Mrs. Waters translated for her. She talked about her school down south, Mather School, where she taught three years, and Ruth and I sang Sweet Swing Low, Sweet Chariot, and Steal Away, the dainty songs. 'Fraid they did not sound much like negro melodies, but we sung 'em, anyway.

More later. I want to mail this this P.M. and then I will begin again.

Always with love,
Dearest Dad:

Ever since last Saturday P.M. I have wanted to sit down and tell you about the things I heard and witnessed on that day, but haven't seemed to find the time somehow. I believe I wrote you in one of my letters a long time ago, didn't I, asking you what were some important questions to ask a candidate for admission to the church? If I didn't, I meant to, for that is one of the things that I didn't have much experience in before I left America. I think I said in my last letter that 14 of our girls were asking for baptism but we were not letting any of them go before the church because they seemed too uncertain about the meaning of it all. I certainly was glad with all my heart that we hadn't, for the way in which the examination was conducted a week ago today was to my mind not much short of criminal.

You, being only a country minister in the conservatism of New England cannot possibly know the proper method of questioning a candidate, so I will proceed to tell you how you should have examined me for instance and Gladys Latimer and other such which it has come to your lot to usher into the fold of the Baptist Church! I will tell you how it is done sometimes, but we hope it won't be so again) in far-off China by some of the old deacons who need a shaking together, or pressing down or running over, or maybe all three I don't know, and we hope they will get it some day in the not so distant future.

"How long do you pray every day?" (This put to a girl not more than sixteen years old.) She answered; three times.
"That is not nearly long enough. Have you ever prayed as long as a half hour at a stretch? -- No? -- Well, you ought to; you ought to pray two or three hours every day."
"What do you say when you pray?" The reply was that she prayed for Christ to forgive her sins, or something like that.
"Pray only one sentence, do you? Anything else? -- Can you read? Well, why can't you read? Well, you ought to. (She turned out to be the daughter of a widow who took in washings, and this girl had been obliged to work and take care of the younger ones all her life. She had wanted so much to study but had never had the opportunity to go to school.)
"Well, you must read. You must find a way to learn how to read. You will never be able to understand the doctrine very well unless you can read. It is very important."
Wouldn't you call that pretty stiff treatment?

There were eight of Mr. Capen's Academy boys who were there. Each one of them in a most manly straightforward way, some of them halting a little from the effort of taking such a big step, stood and told of his own Christian experience. What any one of them said was sufficient without a word further of questioning, but no indeed they weren't going to get out of it as easy as that! To a fine senior boy who had answered the question "Are any of your relatives opposed to your becoming a Christian?" by saying that none of his relatives were in sympathy even with Xnity--the above Quiz was given in a little different form.

"Have you ever prayed?" The boy had not long been a Christian, and he answered honestly that he had a few times.
"Only a few times! That is bad! You ought at least to pray two hours a day. Why, some men pray as long as five or six hours a day, and they get great spiritual power. You never spent all night on your knees, then, did you?"

We were boiling some of us by that time. Mr. Capen saved the day for the boy by speaking out, and calling him by name he asked which was more important, to pray five or six hours a day or to have one's heart right with God!
Another splendid boy confessed that when he came here to school he was one of the worst boys in the school. There was no one else so wickedly proud as he. He was absolutely sure of himself and if things didn't go his way he felt it no more than right to make them go his way. He didn't believe a fig in Christianity and scorned it. But he has come to realize gradually that the men who amount to anything in the world are those who can go about in the world freely and yet have nothing to do with the vices of the world. The vices, even the little ones, are enervating and weakening and are a handicap. He found that he couldn't be at all sure that he could resist temptations. And he felt sure that if he got out into the world the lure of evil things would trap him and he would surely fall. He tried the gospel of Christ, believing that nothing else he had ever heard of could keep him in the right path, and hoping that it could. Now that he has found Christ and knows him as his own personal Savior he is sure, and he determines to cling to this precious new found faith as long as he lives.

I think this is wonderful for a boy not yet out of high school! I was thrilled through as he told it,- yet this is the question that followed a testimony like that.....

"Where can you go to church in the summer time,- at your home?" The boy answered that there was a chapel in a near by village,- Presbyterian chapel.

"It is all right to associate with the Presbyterian friends and to go to church with them, but supposing it came time for communion and you were there what would you do?" Take communion with the others, the boy supposed.

"But it is not right to take communion with them is it?" Then followed a more or less lengthy dissertation upon the baptism by immersion and the baptism by sprinkling, and query as to whether the Presbyterians, being only sprinkled, not immersed, would rightly be called baptized believers. And it wasn't right to break bread with them, was it?" The poor boy was so confused and utterly taken out of the spirit of his splendid confession, and mumbled that he didn't know, hadn't thought about that.

Well, well! We'd better turn to Mr. Capen and ask him to give you further instruction on this subject. You seem to lack a little on this point." Whereupon Mr. Capen promptly and with a decided firmness said that he was perfectly satisfied with the boy's answer and for his part, he should hope that all his boys would not hesitate to take communion with the Presbyterians and to join with them in any other way that they could! I guess the old elder thought he was sat upon that time. (He was)

I shudder to think of my poor little grammar and primary girls going through a mill like that. That is by no means all, simply a fair sample. But I am on that committee, and though I am the youngest one on it and the least among them all, still dared to broach the subject last Wed. evening at the missionaries' prayer meeting, and ask whether the Elder (he is the one who has helped Dr. Ashmore all these years and has done so much in the writing and translating of Dr. Ashmore's colossal work, the conversion of the Bible into Swatow colloquial). But he seems to have Dr. Ashmore's narrow views without his fine sensitive spirit. The Chinese all greatly revere him, however, and that is the reason he was given the seat of honor at the examining board always does the asking of the questions and what could be done about it. It seemed the voice of everyone there that I was expressing, only no one wanted to be the first one to say anything against the Elder It-san! They all looked at each other sheepishly and then agreed that it was scandalous and that of course something could be done about it. So the ball has been started rolling and I do not know what will positively be done about it, but think that something will.

We are hoping to have evangelistic meetings here among the schools as soon as they can be arranged. Very likely the meetings will be in full swing when you get this letter. Will you pray earnestly and ask everybody you know to pray earnestly, that we may have a wonderful blessing? Your loving daughter - Able Dearest Mother of Mine!

Your birthday and it is 10 o'clock at night this very minute and no word written to you yet! But I put duty first this evening. I have just finished a three page letter to Miss Jean Hall Merritt of New Haven, Conn., the leader of the Borean class who had the responsibility of the salary of my helper, Mrs. Lim for this last year. They were interested in what I wrote about her before, she said and that perhaps they could do it another year if I needed a helper for another year. She wanted a picture of Mrs. Lim and asked how long she had been helping me, and so on. She was going away on a trip West in May so I am sending the letter direct to her that she may get it as quickly as possible.

Your birthday present isn't sent yet, either! I don't always have a birthday present for my mother, and when I have a perfectly good one, or maybe even two, wouldn't you think I could manage to send it on time? I will get it off tomorrow if it is a possible thing. I hadn't heard a thing from you since Mar. 7, so you can imagine my joy to have a letter from you and one from Father too yesterday. I had no other letters except the one from Miss Merritt, but when I hear from you that is quite enough to keep me happy. I have made up my mind not to worry when I don't hear from you as often as I would like to, because I know that there are many hundred things to delay letters. The steamers may be late or far between, you may just be busy and ever so many things. I suppose you have adopted a similar philosophy about hearing from me. But your last letter told of your increased family and I must confess that I have thought a great deal about how you were getting along these days. I didn't know how long Gladys was going to stay, - I suppose you didn't know yourself or you would have said, - and I know that an addition like that to your busy life would make a big difference. I don't think that I was the least bit jealous of Gladys, - I would hate to think that I would be as small as that, but I guess I was jealous of your strength being used up when you need to take care of it. Did She go back to her mother's when she left you or back to Burlington? I am ashamed that I haven't written to her and to Arthur more than I have, and I certainly can't expect to get letters from them frequently if I write so seldom myself. But I do want to know all about them and I find my mind all wandering around in a circle when I get to thinking of how they are coming out. I keep seeing them first at Fairfax with you, and then down on the farm or near there, I wonder where they really are and then decide it is no good to worry for I shouldn't know for months what they really are doing.

Although you didn't get any birthday greetings from me on your birthday, as I am hoping Father did this year, yet I think you know even without my telling you, that I am wishing you all the good things that there are to wish for you in this coming year and then wishing there were more good things in the world for me to wish for you! And this isn't idle talk either. God bless you and keep you, my dear precious mother!

Always your loving daughter,

Dearest One:

Three years ago today since I arrived in China!
It seems ages since I left America - but only a few months since I have been here. Mrs. Capen gave me lovely roses today for my anniversary!

I think I have had a little "wake-up" today, too, that will be good for me. I have been reading Torrey's book on personal work. I have been thinking a good deal lately about the girls in the school and why not more are becoming Christian. I have thought of speaking to different ones separately and then have just not done it. For I find that personal work out here is just as hard as it is at home. I never did much at home - and as I didn't get the practice for work out here!

Torrey says that every real Christian should be on the lookout all the time for an opportunity to lead some one to Christ. I'm not that sure. The thought flashed into my head, "Am I a Christian?" I used often to have doubts about that but I find I haven't any longer - and my answer to this question inside of me was, "Yes, I am a Christian, but not a consecrated one. God help me to be truly consecrated to His work." Will you get people to pray that I may be?

This afternoon I had a rare opportunity - of a good long talk with one of the older girls whom I have never known very well. She was going to stay at home because there was no one to walk with her. I got her to walk with me and took her to the head of the lines with me. I spoke to her about the fewness of those folks because Christians, fewer this year... than other years. She said we have talked of it. Then I asked her about the personal workers groups that they used to have. (The teacher had told me that they had all stopped). I found out that they are not all stopped. She still carries on the one of which she is the leader— and that little group of six or seven is coming here for a little talk next Sunday morning. I have found out that the trouble I have been blaming on the girls— their lack of earnestness, is not that by a long shot. The principal trouble is that I thought by saying a few words to the girls now and then that I was doing enough. I haven't been on my job! Well— three years is a long time not to be on your job, isn't it? But I guess if I am to quit worrying I can begin here and hope that I shall not forget the little lesson I have learned today.

Monday morning.

We are having marmalade again. The most delicious fruit in this part of the country. I think I have told you they are a cross between plums and peaches— and if they are not very ripe, have a suggestion of persimmons. Doesn't sound very good, does it? But I'd rather eat one of them than eat most anything else I can think of.

I heard some steamboats whistling this morning, and as I'm hoping there will be mail from P. O. U. U. N. S. as I'm hoping there will be mail from P. O. U. U. N. S. as I'm hoping there will be mail from P. O. U. U. N. S. as I'm hoping there will be mail from P. O. U. U. N. S.

Always with love.

From yours,

P.S. I have written Charlotte about the above, too. Will you get a copy of Torrey's book and send to him as present from me? Address: Bible Institute Colportage Association.

253 LaSalle Ave. Chicago.
Dear Arthur:

Three years ago yesterday I arrived here! It hardly seems possible when I think of the length of time that I have been here, but when I think of the ages that it seems since I have seen you all and the heaps of things that have taken place since I came away, I could easily believe that I hadn’t seen you for ten years! Mr. and Mrs. Capen gave me five beautiful roses yesterday. Shading from pale yellow to a deep crimson, three of them for the years that I have already spent here and two for the two more years that I shall still be here before I go on furlough. I told them I hoped that the years would deepen in richness as the color of the roses! I wish I could keep the roses that gave me such a beautiful thought. I am going to try to slip them all and have the bushes for my own.

Yesterday I had a little "wake-up", too, that will be good for me. I have been reading Torrey’s book on Personal Work. I have been thinking a good deal lately about the girls in the school and why not more are becoming Christians. I have thought of speaking to different ones separately and then just have not done it. For I find that personal work here is just exactly as hard here as it is at home, and before I came out here I guess I thought that it would be easier or something. I never did much of it at home, and now when I have come out here with no other purpose, I am not used to it because I didn’t have the practice at home.

Torrey says that every real Christian should be on the lookout all the time for an opportunity to lead some one to Christ. I’m not, that is sure. The thought flashed into my head, am I a Christian? I used often to have doubts about that, but I haven’t any longer, and the answer to this question was there almost as soon as I realized that the question was there, "Yes, I am a Christian, but not a consecrated one. God help me to be truly consecrated to his work."

Will you and Gladys please pray that I may be, so that the purpose God had in sending me out here may not be frustrated?

Yesterday afternoon I had the rare opportunity of a good long talk with one of the older girls whom I have never known very well. All the girls were going to walk with me, but Sok Eng was going to stay at home because she had no one to walk with her. (The girls always walk two and two.) I got her to walk with me and took her to the head of the line with me. I spoke to her about the fewness this year of the girls who are becoming Christians, fewer this year, it seems, than other years. She said, we have talked of it. Then I asked about the personal workers groups that they used to have. (The teachers told me that that was all stopped long ago.) I found out that they are not all stopped, and this very girl, who isn’t a natural leader and is not nearly so prominent as some of the others, still carries on the little group of which she is leader, and so that little group of six or seven is coming here for a little talk next Sunday morning. If they can get hold of something definite to work for and can get a real interest in someone else, it will be a worth while thing, I think.

So you see that while I have been listening to criticism of the girls, lack of earnestness, and have been willing to lay all the blame on them, the trouble was really not with them at all, but with my own self. I have thought that I would do well if I managed to take care of the routine work of the school and say what little I could to the girls all together now and then,—for instance, at chapel exercises in the morning. But you see, I wasn't on my job! Well. I think that three years is a long time not to be on your job, don't you? But if I am to persist in my plan of not worrying, I can begin here, and hope that I shall not soon forget the little lesson that I have learned!

I wish you could have the delicious fruit that we are having now.
Swatow oranges are famous all over the world for their sweetness. Their season is not yet over though it will be soon. We are also having good pémelos, which are something like grape fruit, only sweeter, and you take them from their skins like oranges and eat one huge lobe at a time. Then there are papayas, which tasted to me at first like raw pumpkin, but which are as sweet and juicy as a musk melon,—if you like them and if you happen to get one with a good flavor. Bananas we can get most of the year. But the prize of all seasons and climates is the mango, and we are just beginning to have that this year. Its flavor is indescribable, but I have probably told you before that it is a cross between parsnips and peaches, with now and then the faintest suggestion of something like turpentine.
Perhaps that doesn't sound appetizing, but there is nothing that can compare with it, to my mind, except a certain dessert that our cook likes to surprise us with on the first hot night in spring time,—Mango Icecream!

I heard some steamboats whistling in the harbor this morning before I was up, and I am wondering whether there will be any mail today for me from certain folks that I love very much!

You will write and tell me all about things, won't you? About Joe and the others there, Uncle George and Uncle Samuels family and the folks in Dover, and all the friends in So. Berwick. And first of all, that precious little migget and her mother!

Very lovingly yours,

Dearest Ones:

What good news do you suppose I have? Miss Sollman went to Canton for a Publication Soc. Comm. and on her way through Hongkong got my Victrola. I took the money that the girls (I.K. and that bunch) sent and added the ten (Mex) which I realized on the five dollar check that Eva Owen sent me after her tiff with I.K. (I figure that Eva blew 18killa up for "misappropriating funds" and that naturally I.K. wouldn't stand for it so probably sent back Eva's $5 which she sent on to me. I.K. didn't tell me this of course and neither did Eva, but I read between the lines and that is what I thought I saw.) Then I took some of the money that came from the tattin (sent by Bessie Pierce and Lillian Carson). You see I had paid out that money in the first place to buy the tattin and I really can do what I please with it as far as the moral right is concerned. So since this Victrola is partly for the girls and partly for ourselves, my conscience is all the more clear on this point.

It cost a pretty penny, though, more than I expected, $148.00. I asked Miss Sollman to get four records, good ones, but the ones I wanted the store did not have, and so she brought me only one, but two or three days afterwards we had a lovely surprise. Our birthdays, Emily's and mine, come near together and so the Sherwin Bungalow people thought the best kind of a present would be records for the new Vic that I was planning to buy. I think so too! But they knew we would be glad to have them now, so they didn't wait for the days. And they gave us each two fine ones, each double faced, with a piece on each side of the record, you know. So although we bought only one record ourselves, these are the pieces that we have and we think we are very lucky. They are all instrumental but Miss Sollman has loaned us one of Alma Gluck's and one of the famous Galliciusi until we get more.

"Mighty Lak' a Rose" (Orchestra selection)
"Mililcent Waltz"
"Gems from a Persian Garden" (Victor Opera Co.)
"" " " " " From the "Bohemian Girl"
"" " " " " Normandie" (Xylophone Solo)
"The Song through" (Orchestra)
"Serenade" (Accordion $50)
"My Florence"

So now I must write and tellabelle not to get the machine after all. I am especially glad that we don't have to wait until next Feb. for it. I suppose that even with freight or shipping charges would not bring the price up to as much as that but since the money was out here and there was the chance to have Miss Sollman choose it for me, I decided to do the deed. I am glad on one account that we are to have the machine in the summer, for the completion of the new house will probably keep us here all summer long. Now don't you worry about that. If you could see the difference in me between last spring and this, you would think I was fat for life in the jungle or anywhere. I am as husky as can be. And I don't have the slightest desire to go anywhere this summer. I am not going to say anything yet about summer school, for I don't know whether I can have one or not. I am beginning to have my troubles with the teachers again and I don't know just how I am coming out. But I am confident of one thing, that I shall not be so weighed down and overwhelmed, whatever happens, as I was last spring. I shall have my weeps and my discouragements but I shall be stronger to meet them.

You asked about the prints in the History of Swatow. Of course H. Fielden's picture is poorly printed but the picture itself is a rather flattering one I think. Dr. Everam's is a poor one and Mrs. Beath's very poor. Anna Foster's is good. I sort of hate to look at the one of me because it has such a washed out dispirited look. I guess it recorded pretty correctly the way I looked and felt at the time, though. It is fairly good of Clare Leach but looks a bit unnatural because she has left off her glasses. The picture of Miss Culley is a splendid one of her, but she looks much older now. It is splendid of Miss Traver but horrid of Mrs.
Worley and not very good of Miss Sollman. It is splendid of the Ashmores. I think I have mentioned before that Mrs. Martha Sanderson Ashmore was our Dr. Ashmore's mother.

I did look for Ruth Whitman's picture in the Feb. number of Missions but could not decide on any that I thought was Ruth. Yes, I do have letters frequently from her still. More frequently than she hears from me, I fear.

By the way, you mentioned in your letter to Emily that Mr. Giberson's letter had arrived, but I couldn't make out whether you meant that mine to him had reached you or that you had received one from him with the money - I think you have not said in any other letter.

I am wondering whether you didn't receive my letter about the sewing machine. I should think you ought to have had it long ago. I am of course delighted at the prospect and as I said in my first letter about it, Miss Sollman advises me to have one from Monkey Ward's because they can more easily send supplies and repair and give information. If you have sent the money, however, don't worry, for I shall be able to get it out here I am sure. I said in my letter that the Damascus Grand rotary sounds fine to me.

About your sending money out here. I shall be glad to have you do that now while exchange is so good, simply keeping out as you suggested, enough for things that I want you to buy for me. Later on exchange may slump and then, especially when it comes near furlough time, I'll tell you whether I want or need it sent out or not.

A letter from Frances tells me that she is to be valedictorian of her class at her graduation this year. Isn't that splendid? I am so glad for them. Aunt Susie must be very proud. I have sent Frances a Swarovský silver chain with a Canton ivory carved plaque for a pendant. It is one of the things that Miss Sollman got for me in Canton when she went down this time. I could spend a mint on those things if I had it. I got only a few things like that for gifts expressly. The little plaque cost .80 and the chain .95 which means that it costs about .80 gold aside from the postage. I am sending it direct to her in the hope that she may get it in time for graduation.

Mother dear, why don't you go to a chiropodist for those corns? There ought to be a good one in Burlington, I should think, and if some thing can be done to relieve such suffering it is wrong not to do it. Pm, I think that you ought to see to it that she goes if possible. She will say that she doesn't want any man to see her feet, but that is nonsense for any chiropodist has seen far worse looking corns and feet than hers. I shall certainly make a bee line for one when I get to America. My corns are a nuisance to me too, but in far less degree. When I went to the corn doctor in Boston he fixed up my feet for several months. Mother would probably have to go several times in succession at first because here are so bad. It will be expensive too, but not too expensive to pay.

My health is good but my plaguey head is a mess. If I took time to have the ointment rubbed on as I should I suppose it would get better but I don't, and I don't know when I shall ever be in a position to want or be willing to stand, even, having a greasy head all the time! I have no self respect when I have a greasy head, and I can't bear to live with myself or let anyone else!

I knitted part of the pink robe for little Ruth, and the sewing woman did the rest. I did the crocheted edge all myself- you couldn't guess where I learned it could you? The tatted bonnet I did not do! I have barely touched a tatting shuttle since I came out here. If you could ever see the lightning way the girls flash their shuttles through their fingers you would understand why I am perfectly willing never to be seen tatting out here. I still would like to knit once in a while if I had the time. That is perhaps because I am not quite as slow at that. If you ever have a chance to get new tatting or crochet books or designs in crosstitch I should be more than happy to have them. The samples that came before were very nice.
Gladys and Arthur sent pictures which I think are fine. Isn’t that baby a darling? I shall be so anxious to have more pictures later so that I can see her grow up too! I wish Gladys would have a picture of herself smiling a little bit. I think I could feel more acquainted with her if she did. I think the baby looks like Grandma S. There! Has anyone else said that? I really do! And if she will grow up to be one half as nice and one third as capable and one hundredth as lovable as that person, she will be worth a good deal to the world and we shall all be proud of her. Pa—how does that strike you? Don’t you pretty much agree with me?

I haven’t heard from the tattling from Gladys Latimer, Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Speed, but it is good news that they haven’t sent any on to you yet for that makes me think that they are going to try to sell it anyway. I think I’ll not send any more to Lillian Carson for she says "Everybody most in Bridgewater do their own tatting and if it had not been from China and for that cause and your sake I don’t really believe that they would have purchased it very freely. But they thought it very pretty and therefore responded to the sale." XXXXXX! !!!!!!! Well I don’t think it hurt them to buy the lace even though they didn’t want it very much. So I shan’t weep about that I assure you. But Alta Smith wanted me to send her some and so I am going to ask her if she still wants it. I shall plan not to send any more to Bridgewater without a definite request. Wouldn’t you? Lillian sent $10.15 so you see I made about double on that. I don’t know yet how much Nex it brought but it is over $20.00 I know. (The money that I took for the Vic. was the equivalent of that, not the actual money.)

Please give my love to Mrs. Weible when you write. I hope if she does ever hear me that I will have something to say that is worth her listening to. I have enough in my heart that is interesting, but whether I shall ever be able to make a good missionary talk is another thing!

Please take all duty that you have to pay out of my funds. I am not saying this for effect not because it sounds well but because I want you to do it. I shall feel much better about sending things if you will.

I do not understand about the difference in the plan for payment of salary. I had heard nothing whatever about it, and I wonder what it can mean. It will be very nice if that is the way it is to be and if it means that I will have extra gifts for the work. I can’t believe, though that the Board would approve of the people’s doing that and sending their mission money directly to the field instead of through the Board. There hasn’t been a break of any sort has there, between the Aroostook churches and the Board? I hope you feel about as much out of it as I do, not being in Maine any more. The others (besides Mrs Gammon) had to pay $3.25 duty on the tatting and made it up the same way that she did. I think it will be perfectly lovely if her Sunday school class wants to give something for the new house. I can’t tell now which we shall need first—dining room table and chairs or a bookcase, but there will be furnishings needed everywhere from veranda to kitchen! It is the most fun to watch it go up. We can go up stairs now and out on our wonderful veranda. I wish you could be transported here and see everything as we see it and be able to have a sight of the work and all as it is.

Ruth Sperry counted the days yesterday, I think, and it is 56 days until she leaves here for Hongkong. She says she can hardly believe it, and that she is really and truly awfully sorry to leave us out here and there is only one reason why she would do it and that reason is James of course. I shall be awfully sorry to have her go. I don’t know just what we shall do about the English until Emily finishes her work in that language. Maybe she will take some of the work and I will take some of it and maybe I will have to take all that Ruth is doing now. End will still be teaching English for us, but there will be still another high school class to plan for next fall and so I don’t know just where we stand.

Emily is not very well and I am often worried about her. The trouble for which she was operated on shortly before her coming out here is coming back again apparently and every month she is nearly beside herself with pain for two days and then is exhausted. She has to go to bed and often can't even lie down because she is in agony. She has a very small appetite and eats almost no dinner and supper, although she eats more breakfast than I do. She doesn't seem to be as blue and lonesome as she used to or perhaps not as often, but still she gets terribly discouraged about the language. She can do the characters but feels that she doesn't get along as well in the talking as she ought to. But I am sure she will come out all right in the end. They told me it was a godsign if I got discouraged about the language, for then I would put forth greater effort to get it better, or something to that effect!

I think I told you that I had a card from Emily O. from Manila, and that I wrote her a long letter and received a card in reply that she was going home on account of the heat. I guessed there might be another reason, but of course didn't know. From Japan she mailed a letter telling me her secret. She says, "Of course I hate to leave George but I am going home to give both mother and child the right chance." She said she loved the letter I wrote and wants me to write again.

Eva Sawtelle sends me the Atlantic Monthly and writes occasionally. I think I owe her a letter now. Her last word was that she was engaged but didn't expect to be married for ages, about four years. That sounds funny to me. She has sense to know that she isn't as old as she was once and if she has really found the right man I should think she would want to marry him right straight away. (Hear the old maid's opinion!)

Zu writes to me oftener than I deserve as far oftener than I write to her. I think I told you that she sent me a beautiful pink silk undervest and her mother sent me a lovely pair of silk stockings for Christmas.

Day before yesterday I received a fine box of the most delicious caramels from Emily's mother. When she sent me the candy last year I waited so long before answering that I was ashamed, and so this time I sat right down yesterday and wrote her the best kind I know how. I can't guess anything and I want always to tell the truth so this letter wasn't the easiest in the world to write but I can't do any better. I want to know what you think of it so I am going to send you rough draft of it.

Heaps of love, your own

P.S. A girl in Marion Garrison's telephone office wants me to write a "history of my career" since I came to China. I don't know when I can do it. I want to write to some more Assisook people. Do you think Prescott but I don't know what to write. Just plodding along day by day things— or else trials and tribulations which aren't very good subjects for missionary letters.

My dear "Emily" Mother,

This morning about ten o'clock Emily and I were thinking about you. You are thought about and spoken of pretty often out here, somehow, but this morning we were thinking especially about you. One of the reasons was that we had both stopped our work to have a taste—a several tastes—in fact, of those delicious caramels that came yesterday afternoon. Having three daughters you do know what girls like, don’t you? I think you are lovely to send them.

Wing Simpson, Emily’s teacher, says that to know the mother of a good friend is something like having another mother! I do agree with her, and I am sure that when I go to America there will be a little mother in Philadelphia whom I shall be very eager to see. I know before I see her that I shall love her, partly for her daughter’s sake and partly for her very own sake.

I wish you could be out here for a little while with us and see us at our daily tasks. If we weren't so busy, we should find it hard to wait to get settled in our new house. I am delighted with it, and, thanks to Emily. I don't have to worry about the details of it. I have not a bit of brains about building a house, and if the matter depended entirely upon me I fear there would be some bad mistakes. Emily has the whole thing in her head when I haven't begun to grasp a half of it!

Emily has the faculty of helping out in a good many ways like that. Did you know it? She perhaps doesn't tell you that she attends to the music lessons and to all my ruined housekeeping accounts and some other things - but they are a great help to me. What do you think is her latest method of making something easier for me? She prepares the morning worship lesson in Chinese, and I just have to get it from her but don't have to study it all out myself! Emily says there are little things for her - but truly some of them would be mountains for me with the rest of my work! You are the dear mistress of a very dear girl. She is so dear and I am fortunate indeed to have her among my friends. You are indeed to have sending you so much for the candies.

Yours ever lovingly,

Abbie J. Saunders

Dear Ones:

I am enclosing to you a letter to Mabelle which will tell you some of the things we have been dealing with. Or rather that I have been dealing with. For I must say I feel rather alone when it comes to things like this. We have had girls in school before who have stolen money and other things but I didn't have charge then and the girl was a younger one always. This girl is a first year high school girl and one of the only two who will be likely to continue their study next year. The problem was a very big one to me, and even now I am not sure that the girl is absolutely sincere. But I believe I prefer to make a mistake on the side of leniency than on the side of harshness.

Since I wrote last I have been afflicted with a most annoying and painful sinus cold. I think it is very similar to the kind you have Pa, with the head pressure. I had such a headache for three days running that it seemed as tho I would go crazy. It didn't keep to the top of my head but ran down the frontal bone, in the cheek bones in front of my ears and finally in my jaws. I couldn't lie down part of the time, even when I had a little fever. But if I rubbed ephedrin all over my face and sat propped up in my big arm chair, I could be comparatively comfortable for perhaps an hour. Then when the effect of the ephedrin wore off the head ache and pressure would come back again. Then I began to cough and I wondered what kind of a sickness I was going to have. But it was the kind that is not dangerous and yet most uncomfortable. I put that smarting stuff all over my chest and may face so many times that ever since, I have had a beautiful countenance. Just exactly like an Ocean beach sunburn! Well I thought at the time that I never would have a clear head again, but I am better then ever now and very thankful that the hot days did not begin until after I was out of bed. It isn't as hot yet as it will be of course but still enough so that I lose several quarts (?) it seems, of perspiration a day. I don't know how it will seem to be staying here all summer. But after school closes, the 30th of June and the country exams are out of the way, I plan to take a rest, then start in and write some letters, then try to get a little sewing done for next winter, if it is ever cool enough for me to bear to touch wooden things! I don't know that I can get out to do any country exams this time. I am sending teachers to several places but don't want to get flagged the way I did last year, and don't intend to, for I don't believe that is in the plan. When Mabelle comes back and I don't have the responsibility I shall be able to do much more I hope. Oh, I can see so many ways now that I might have helped her that I didn't but I still have the chance ahead of me and I hope I'll be able to agree with her ideas so that I may be a real help to her instead of a burden. The experiences I am having now ought to make me able to to that anyway!

Must send this off on the next mail so my message this time is rather short.

Love and more love,

Dear Ones:

Sunday night before the last week of strenuousness, and we are taking it easy for the last time this week, I suppose. Emily and I are in my study comparing our typewriters. She had a coronet sent her for her birthday, and it is most interesting to compare the two machines. Mine is bigger if anything than a good many typewriters, and hers of course is hardly bigger than a tiny minute. Hers is smaller in every way; the keys are closer to each other, the type is much smaller, the platen is narrower and that means that only narrow paper can be used. Hers is noisier than mine, but doesn't make the heavy clatter that the big heavy machines do. The grand thing about hers is that she can take it anywhere she goes, while mine has to be packed in its box with all care, to be taken any distance, and if it is to be taken upstairs, I have to call the boy to take it for me, because it would pull my very gizzard out before I got halfway up to the first landing!

Let me tell you, tho', that I would not change my splendid typewriter for any that I have seen. I like mine best of all, without any shadow of a doubt. And if I don't make more use of it this summer than I did last year I shall put myself down for a chump indead.

Yesterday the teachers went out to examine the last country school, and so that business is all finished. I found out from Mrs. Baker that their school will close early after all and so she is inviting the teachers up there to examine the school. I am so glad that our teachers don't have to go. Graduation day is such a strain; or rather the events leading up to that day are so strenuous that afterwards everyone feels let down, and it is a task to collect wits and get at another job directly your own is finished for a year. The teachers are glad too, and they are also glad that we are not to have a summer school this year. I guess it was God's leading that we were following when we decided not to have it. The two younger teachers have not been well at all, and it would have been a crime to ask them to do anything this summer. They will have enough to do to get ready for their beginning to study again in the fall. They are behind in their arithmetic and I have arranged to have a man teacher help them catch up this vacation.

Thursday morning and Friday morning and a good part of yesterday morning were spent in taking grades. For each subject there are the mark for the last of the three monthly exams, the average of those three together, and the daily mark for the term. Then there is the final average in each subject, too. Really, to have every one of those come to me, and for me to have to write down all of them for 140 students, each student having from ten to fourteen subjects, it is too much. I really think we might devise a better method of recording the marks. It is truly an awful strain and I'm not sure that it is right for us to subject ourselves to such a strain if there is another way that will do just as well. I am going to work this summer at a different method, to see if we can't find a better Plan.

Well, it is nine o'clock and I am thinking that the best thing I can do is to hie myself to my little bed. I hate to think of all the things that depend on my thinking about them to get them done in this next week. But I am certainly not worrying about them this year as I did last year. I am sure it is because people have been praying for me. I am learning something every day, I believe, about the power of prayer. Just today I had rather a wonderful little experience all to myself as I was reading a little book of Habelle's about the victorious life. When I read the verse "My grace is sufficient for thee", all at once I saw so plainly the reason why I am bothered so much about things that worry me. Emily, for instance. I do love her dearly and yet sometimes it seems as tho I could not bear the thought of so many years stretching ahead when I must come up against her tempers and her flareups. I have always thought that getting "mad" like that was one of the worst sins and one of the most to be avoided; and now it is very hard for me to be as tolerant as I know I should. But this afternoon as I was reading, suddenly it was as clear as day that I needn't be worried by things like that if I would only "let go".

My dearest Beloveds, goodnight!

With all my love,

Dear Arthur and Gladys:

I wonder? It has been so long since I received the darling picture of Ruth that I am almost ashamed to write and thank you for it now! And the snapshots are splendid, too. How delighted I am to have them, every one of them! It makes me feel as tho I am not so terribly far away, after all. Be sure you keep on sending pictures to me so that I can keep acquainted for two years more, and so that I'll know how my little niece looks when I get back home!

My letters to you folks nowadays are pretty incomplete affairs I think, both as to the subject matter therein contained and as to the frequency with which I take my pen? in hand. Well, two weeks more and I shall be free from some of the things that are uppermost in my mind just now. Not that I shall be free from all difficult problems then, but the ones I'll have then will be different. I shall have to arrange for teaching in the fall. We are surely to have a third year high school class this next term and the extra classes will have be arranged. I don't know who will take the places of the two girls who have been teaching this year but are to study next year. Mui Teu, the teacher in our little primary school, is to do the same thing and as yet I have no one to take her place. This one last mentioned is probably the brightest, most accurate and most dependable of the three, and this summer she is to stay here and learn to write on my typewriter. I think she will prove a great help when she has learned this accomplishment. Several other girls will stay here and I have promised to find work for them. For one it will be cross-stitching on table runners; for two or three others, tatting; for another crocheting and for another odds and ends such as pasting back to back old used postcards that have been sent to me from America, cutting out pretty pictures from old magazines for use in the primary school, or making corrections in the school catalogue. Then I shall have my teacher more hours a day than I can now, and I can't tell what I shall be studying in preparation to teach next year. It may be that beloved (?) Myers General History, or it may be arithmetic or the advanced class in algebra, or it may be a course in the Proverbs or the Psalms.

I am not going out in the country for examinations this June, for the reason that I didn't stand very well the one trip that I took last June and I want to keep myself in trim at least until the school is closed. There is every prospect that I shall keep up like a rubber ball if I only have the sense to be just a wee bit careful. So the chances are pretty good I would say. These country schools are flourishing in some places. At Sa-leng, where I examined 9 or 11 pupils last January, three teachers yesterday examined 55, and they say that I shall simply have to furnish another teacher, for there os a prospect of over a hundred pupils in the fall. Tomorrow our master and two of the high school mice go to another place to examine, and the following day they are to go on to see a school that was just opened at Wai Years time. Next Saturday there is still another to be done and a week from today they go to Ohaochoufu where Mrs. Baker has invited us to examine the two schools under her jurisdiction.

Day before yesterday we had a treat. We (the unmarried ladies and Mr. Carman) had a wonderful sail (a little bit tippy but not scary enough to worry me in the least) down to Double Island. Some of the folk have already gone down there for the summer and we all went in bathing in the surf. We had the most wonderful time, and it was perfectly safe even if the waves did toss us up and then send us down and spin us around on the sand, for Dr. Newman and Mr. Carman are both splendid swimmers, and they stayed with us all the time. It was just glorious. Emily and I did not think we should go anywhere this summer but would have to stay and help look after the new house. But several weeks ago just for fun we asked for the Doubl e Island house for a week or two the end of the season. But now that we have been down there again and have it fresh in our minds just how fine it is, I think we shall let the house go for a week or so and let some one else look at it. Maybe we'll have other chances to sail down and back the same night the way we did Friday. The house belongs to the mission and is divided up among those who ask for it, preference being given to those who have been in the mission longest. On the way back the other night the breeze was just enough to fill the sails but not enough to tip the boat, and it was steady all the way. We nearly sang our threats out, everything from Merrily we Roll Along and Sweet and Low to Keep the Home Fires Burning and Till We Meet Again. The moon fairly outshone herself, and as for me, I was literally drifting in a sea of beauty, loveliness and restfulness for one short hour. I love the sailing so, for one thing, for another I haven't had a moonlight sail like that forty years— is it? It seems so! And then this whole week has been a swamp of big and little worrisome things. That night everything combined to make us happy, even tho we were all tired out when we started out in the afternoon, and some of us even cross and ill tempered! Nature is a marvelous healer!

I say! Can you think of anything much more tantalizing than to get two slips notifying you of packages from America, at three o'clock on Sat. P.M. when the cook is away in the country and the house boy is left alone to get tea and supper and you are going to have guests for tea? And when the cools, the only other person who could be sent across the bay to Swatow City to get the package has already gone earlier on other business? And when one of the packages has to be examined for duty and that has to be done promptly at two o'clock or not until the next day? And then you fortiorily decide that you simply will have to possess your soul in patience until Monday, and not be able to know until then whether they be packages containing such things as curtains or engagement rings or patches or used post cards!

(NOTE: Not that we don't appreciate very much any patches or old, pretty postcards, for they help us in our business; but just at that psychological moment they are almost an anti-climax. Also: not that I am or ever have been guilty, especially since coming to these domains, of ever hoping for or expecting or looking forward to getting, either thru the mails or otherwise such a diverting thing as an engagement ring! Ah, no! That was merely put in for the sake of illustrating my point. That unfortunate person is Ruth Sperry, who wanted to throw her postcards into the bottom of the sea when she got them instead of her engagement ring. She hasn't got it yet but is expecting it every mail. Poor girl!)

I know of course that I should spend my time and energy in thinking what nice things it may be, and anticipating while I still have the chance. For if it shouldn't be the thing I am at the moment hoping for, and I could have it the same day, then all my opportunity for anticipating it, and the joy of hoping for it, would all be over so soon, whereas if I had over Sunday to enjoy that blissful state of mind, how fortunate I should consider myself. Ahem! I really suppose that more than half what I have written is mere words and what my actual state of mind is a cross between these two extremes, tempered, or should I say aggravated, by an eating curiosity?

Well, this is Sunday night and I must go to bed and stop this nonsense. I warn you, if I could see you face to face I would not stop with a small amount like this! What will Gladys think of me, Arthur, if I keep on much longer raving in this fashion? (Wouldn't you honestly advise me to quit before any more damage is done?)

Any amount of love to you all,

Abbie.
Dear Mother:

My letters to you folks nowadays are pretty incomplete affairs. I think, both as to the subject matter therein contained and to the frequency with which I take my pen in hand. Well, two weeks more and I shall be free from some of the things that are uppermost in my mind now. I shall have other problems then, some of them not so very easy, but different. I shall have to arrange for the teaching in the fall. We are surely to open a third year high school class in the fall and I have to arrange for those extra classes as well to see about teachers to take the place of the two girls who have been teaching in the school this year. Mui tsu, the other one of the three who were to have been in that class last year but stopped a year to teach, will stay here this summer and I will teach her to use my typewriter. I don't expect to use much effort myself but to use the book mostly. She is the brightest and most dependable of the three and the most accurate, and I think will be a great help to me in the matter of attending to business letters and some others. Then several other girls will stay here and I have promised to find work for them. For one it will be cross-stitching on table runners; for two or three others tatting, for another crocheting, and for another, odds and ends such as pasting old post cards that have been sent from America, either back to back or pasting another piece of paper on the back, and cutting out pretty pictures from old magazines for use in the primary school, and making corrections in the school catalogue etc. Then I shall have my teacher more hours a day and I presume I shall be studying something besides Meyer's General History. There is a possibility that we may have a better teacher than I for the M.G.H. but I don't yet dare hope. At any rate I shall have to get ready for Arithmetic in one or two classes and perhaps Higher Algebra. On see I have gone easy this first year and I guess it is a good thing that I did, for now I am in good condition to go ahead and try to do what a full sized woman ought to do next year. But in spite of all these things that I am looking ahead to for the summer time I shall write some letters first. Oh, I forgot! I had fully decided that I will never again say a thing about what I am going to do, but rather wait until it has at least begun to do it. You see I thought I should be able to have the summer school, in fact my mind was pretty much set upon it, but I couldn't manage and I am very thankful that I had sense enough to find that out before I started. I sometimes wonder whether my letters to you are not pretty much a recital of what I planned to do and then didn't! Maybe some day I will do something I don't know.

The country school work is flourishing in some places. Yesterday three of the teachers went out to Sa lang where they went last year and the last Jan. I examined 9 or 11. Tomorrow Heng S.S. and two of the girls go to Nam lang for exam. and the next day on up to Kuang pou, Hong Lauts home, where they have just started a girls' school. Next Sat. they will probably go to Tat hau pou, and after school is closed some of them will go up to Chaochow fu, which is not one of my schools, by the way. Mrs. Baker particularly requested that we go from here to do the examining this time.

Day before yesterday we had a treat. We (the unmarried ladies and Mr. Carman) had a wonderful sail (a little bit tippy but not scary enough to worry me in the least if some of the others had not been scared) down to Double Island. Dr. and Mrs. Newman are already down there on their vacation and also Ruth Hall (of Hopo) and Marjorie Fleming (of Swatow) and we all went in bathing in the surf. We had the most wonderful time. The two men were in bathing with us and we can swim anyway, those of us who went out where the surf could touch us, so we weren't the least bit concerned and it was just glorious. Emily and I asked for the Double Island house some weeks ago, for the last week in Sept. or the first week in Aug. (I mean the other way around of course!) but it was almost in fun and we didn't really think we could be spared from the looking after the house for that length of time, but it turned out that we have tried the bathing down there and it is fresh in our memories we are quite sure that we shall want to go down there. Miss Sullivan is to be there for the whole of August, I understand. I think this summer will find us sailing down there as we did Friday night a good many times. On the way back the other night the breeze was just enough to fill the sails but not enough to tip the boat, and it was steady all the way. We sang our throttes out almost, everything from Merrily we Roll along and Sweet and Low, to Keep the Home Fires Burning and Till we meet Again. The moon fairly outshone herself and we drifted literally in a sea of beauty, loveliness and perfect restfulness for one short hour! I do love the sailing so, and everything combined that night to make us happy, even tho we were all tired and some of us very cross and even ill tempered when we started out in the afternoon. Nature is a marvelous healer!

What could be more tantalizing than to get two slips notifying you of packages from America, Saturday afternoon when the cook is out with the teachers on a country trip, and the cookie has already gone to Swatow on other errands, and there is no one left in the house to send but the houseboy, who has to do all the preparing himself for tea and supper (with the cook away), and you are going to have guests for tea, and besides it is after three o'clock, and there might not be time to get across to the other side anyway, and besides one of the packages has to be examined and for that you have to be at the office promptly at two o'clock! And you forlornly decide that there is absolutely no way out of it, and you simply will have to possess your soul in patience until Monday at least at noon, and maybe until four or five o'clock before you can know what is in store for you. We are so happy to have old postcards sent out, but once in a while it happens that when you are hoping for a package from your mother or even for an engagement ring, along comes a pag. of old postcards and you fairly want to throw them into the bottom of the sea, even tho you know way down in the depths of your soul that you are as glad as can be to have them! Now you know how bad I am!

Of course I am hoping now that tomorrow I shall have your package, but can't tell until it comes. Here's hoping!

Yours with my heart's love,

Abbie J.

P.S. A letter from Mabel Bovell says:

"I seem to remember that Mr. Tatum has your cousin or something, I know the Miss Hall he is to marry, and have lived in the same house with her at Kiasing". Don't that news? I haven't had a thing but cards from him so far since I've been out here so don't know at all what this affair has been etc.
Dear Mother and Father:

The packages that I had to wait over Sunday weren't postcards at all but they were nice typewriter paper and curtain cloth that up to my best ideas and snaps and powder puffs and stuff to make hats of and bellring and typewriter oil and teeny tiny scissors and just-right tape and shoe string and all the rest, and all of the things with the almost dry goods store smell about them. I had to pay $1.05 duty on the big p package and I have found out why. Things come in her duty free if they are valued at less than $15.00. It is too bad that I have been too stupid to find this out and tell you before now but the fact remains that I haven't and so I had to pay the duty. So if you are going to send things again that can be divided so that any one package will not be valued quite up tp $15.00 it will probably save money for me. You did not have to pay any postage at all on these things, did you ?! It costs something to get things to me, all right. Oh, I had such a good time opening my things and everything is just exactly what I wanted! Indeed I do very much prefer to have you pick out the things for me instead of sending to M.A.W. for them as I floor brush I mentioned is simply one of those like we have always had at home for a stove or hearth brush when it gets too dirty too use with the dustpan; a wooden handle and bristles that are fine for getting into corners. What do you call them ?

It is hot, hot and I am so thankful that I have a tub of cold water upstairs waiting for me when I get thru doing this. It is now half past eight in the evening and I am down & my study writing this. Today has been rainy and now the air is so humid that it is almost hard to breathe. I am going to work a little on straightening up tuitions to see that my ace counts are all straight before the girls go to their homes for the summer. And then I am going to work a little on the schedule for our final examinations next Monday and Tuesday. And then I am going straight to bed. Today Emily began to play the graduation song to accompany the girls when they march into the chapel singing and also the class song of the graduates. I have played them for the past two years and can do it again if necessary but I thought she would like to do it and when I asked her she said she would be delighted. It will be fine to feel that she is sharing with me the sense of responsibility for the graduating exercises and anyway it will be a relief not to have to to everything, play the organ as well as give out the diplomas and make the speech, etc. She is afraid that she will get rattled so that she can't do it well enough but I don't think she will. She plays lots of things better than I do, and I am sure that she will do this beautifully. I'm so glad I asked her, for she just grabbed the chance and said she loved to have me ask her and she would just love to do it. She feels that just studying this old language is such a useless thing. I shall certainly be glad for her when she gets to doing something besides digging away all day. It may be that I am just enough of a phlegmatic temperament to realize that there is nothing very but there is not a thing phlegmatic about Emily and I am sure it is wearing her all out to do it. She is bothered terribly with neuritis and that is always worse and makes her blue if she has nothing but her study to think about. I have noticed that more than once. Mabelle said before she went home that she hoped E. would not teach much in the school until her language study was over, and then I agreed with her because in my own case I was so thankful not to have any more interruptions than I had. But it is true that one person cannot possibly know what is absolutely the best thing for another person to do, especially if he be judging merely from his own experience. I should have been bothered I think, with more outside work than I had when I was trying to get my language done, but the thing that E. seems to need and she has admitted it herself, is to get out and talk with the girls more. I don't know just what her attitude as a teacher will be, but there I go on my pet hobby; worrying about what somebody else should do. That is a trait I perfectly detect in anybody else. I have been telling the girls lately two or three times that each one of us has a personal responsibility first of all. "Lord, and what shall this man do?" What is that to thee? Follow me." I will do well to practice my own preaching.

When ! I'm HOT !! There is not a breath around this corner where my typewriter table is and I have been pounding away as fast as I can make my fingers go. I have just looked at my watch again and find that it is still half past eight, which makes me rather curious as to the really correct time. The house is suspiciously quiet upstairs and I remember now being a little surprised that it was still so early a little while ago when I looked for I had done quite a little reading before I came in here.

Love to you both with all my heart,
