

Recipients of the David M. Stowe Fund for Mission Research, 2015

The David M. Stowe Fund for Mission Research was established by the Stowe family in 2003 to provide funds to support visiting researchers who come to the Yale Divinity Library to use its missions-related collections. The fund is typically made available to young scholars who plan to attend the biennial Yale-Edinburgh Group meeting hosted by the Divinity Library and intend to spend at least one week in residence in New Haven to use the Divinity Library's collections. See <http://divinity-adhoc.library.yale.edu/Yale-Edinburgh> for information about the Yale-Edinburgh Group. Other researchers are also supported upon application if they need to use resources at the Yale Divinity Library to complete their work.

Several young scholars received support from the Stowe fund for travel and accommodation costs during the 2014-2015 fiscal year. The six researchers who attended the Yale-Edinburgh Group conference and did research at the library in June 2015 are shown below. Also receiving Stowe funds to support her research trip to Yale in May 2015 was Maria-Magdalena Fuchs, Ph.D. candidate at Princeton University.

Emily Stewart, Ph.D. candidate at the University of Pittsburgh

Amos Chewachong, Ph.D. candidate at the University of Edinburgh.

Manpreet Kaur, Assistant Professor at DAV College in Chandigarh, India

James Taneti, Adjunct Professor at Campbell University Divinity School

Amber Thomas, Ph.D. candidate at the University of Edinburgh.

K. Kale Yu, Assistant Professor at Nyack College