HOPEFUL THE LONG JOURNALS

by Y. Y. Huang, Dean of Tsingnan University

After having evacuated on January 21st, 1945 from the campus at Senyenmiao, we took refuge in two nearby villages a mile apart from each other. They were less than ten miles from the enemy's out-posts. From all angles the enemy was closing in more tightly day by day as if to throw a cordon around us, and we sensed the more keenly our imminent danger. The two havens were now no longer safe for the three hundred of us including one hundred male and female students, two hundred faculty, staff members, work-men and their families. Their ages varied from old women over seventy to newly-born babies. It was evident that some action for our safety must be taken without delay. It seemed that there was no alternative than to dissolve the camp as soon as possible. So with a heavy heart, yet with unshaken determination, the committee of six, left in-charge-of University declared its dissolution. Students must first be cleared out by the end of March, 1945 and the rest not later than April 15th.

Every possible aid was given to students to facilitate their evacuation to safer places. The students knew that the committee meant well and took our order in the finest spirit. They sold to the peasants at an incredibly low price all personal belongings which could not be carried on their own shoulders on the long trek ahead. When the dead-line came, every single student had left. Gone with them were their buoyant spirit and youthful, cheerfulness even in face of sufferings and danger. Couples in red and blue strolling arm in arm up and down the hilly paths were no more to be seen, nor were there small groups of threes or fours chatting, playing or singing in the moonlit rice-fields. We, the elderly, who stayed behind could not but feel a loss of life and vigor even though time was too precious for emotions.

Evacuation of women and children was the next move. Already under way was the organization of families into small groups. An understanding was reached before-hand that we should aim at Yen-Pa which had been overrun by the enemy but was now liberated. It was about thirty miles from our camp and the shortest available route by which we could get to Meih sien. President Lee who was at Meih sien had, by then, got in touch with us, urging us to go eastward to join him. He planned to open school again there. By the middle of April, the majority of the families had gone to Yen-Pa. About ten families were left behind.

I was just beginning to learn to sit up after slowly recovering from meningitis and relapsing fever contracted within a fortnight. Either disease would certainly have killed me were it not for the good care of the college physician and two nurses on the one hand and my own will to live on the other. Simply I could not leave to any one the protection of my two motherless daughters, one at the age of seven and the other under two when my friends had their own children to worry about in time of troubles. My convalescence took some time. It was not until the middle of May that I regained my strength.

Then a message came from our comrades at Yen-fa that under no circumstances should unnecessary delay be entertained. President Lee was expecting us at Meih sien before July 1st. I managed to go to Yen-fa by myself for a conference. My colleagues were happy to see me still alive. It was decided that the group already there were to move on immediately under the leadership of Mr. Tse Chu-kit, while I was to lead the group still in our camp and start the trek a bit later.

Upon my return to the camp, I found that during the week's absence the guerrillas had set up their headquarters only fifteen minutes' walk from our huts. Their presence was, in the opinion of many of us, a sure invitation to the enemy's attack sooner or later. As a matter of fact, the enemy was already carrying on mopping up operations in the region in earnest. Their coming was simply a matter of time. The situation was made worse by robbery and plunder right at our door. Hardly any day was passed without some kind of misfortune nearby. One evening a shoe-maker was shot to death in cold blood in a lonely shelter outside our camp merely for a small savings he had earned. He was an old man, over seventy, who had followed his trade with Lingnan for the last forty years. What a pity! But we could do nothing to help our old friend already dead. Our own danger was thwarted off because we were sufficiently armed. Taking his death as a warning, and after winding up our business, we managed to get to Yen-fa by the end of May. There we found the first group had already left several days before on their hazardous journey toward Meih sien. Its story has been vividly told by my esteemed colleague Mr. Sz-to Wai. So I shall confine myself in telling here only the experiences of the second group.

We would have soon followed the footsteps of the first bunch, were it not for the new out-break of serious fighting to the East which blocked the path. The enemy was then moving fast in several directions in their attempt to destroy the main force of the Seventh Route Army at Sun-Nam. There was not the slightest chance to get thru. <sup>Not</sup> Until we were ascertained that the enemy had deserted all the towns they once occupied and devastated, dared we ~~proceed~~ to proceed on our journey. A month by then was spent at Yen-fa patiently waiting for a favorable opportunity.

For some time the two groups were out of touch with each other. Each was anxious about what the other was doing. Later on by devious means, we succeeded in making contact again. The first group had reached Ching-fa without mishaps, but they urgently advised us to seek an easier and less dangerous route if possible. The one they had taken was over high mountains on a lonely path, about a footwide, where a slip would mean certain death in below. Life and death hung on a string of hair, so to speak. Furthermore, it was hot summer. Their route then three full days' walk thru the enemy out-posts and lines in order to reach Tung-wan, the first safe stop-over. There was no means of transportation other than shank's moves! Just imagine women and children jerking along under such conditions. The first group did it. It was a miracle. But why not let the second group explore an easier and shorter way - this was our intuitive reaction. It was not impossible, we found to reach Tung-wan in two days. The first day by boat, and the second on foot. "Splendid", we said to ourselves. But was it safe? We called upon General Wan Chung-lam, the Chief Staff of the local forces. He is a Lingnan alumnus, ever-ready to help. "True", said he thoughtfully, "there is this new route you mention. But you have to cut thru the enemy lines at two points. In between you will find enemy out-post men always on the alert. The crossing can not be done in open day, only during moonlit nights. More-over, there is always the danger of being caught. You know what all this means". We nodded approvingly with a smile. "But" continued he in an emphatic tone, "if you dare, what else can not be done? I shall help whenever I can".

After our interview with him, we came home with our spirit emboldened. I immediately called a meeting of our group. I lay all the cards on the table and called for a blunt vote - "Dare we?" or "Dare we not?" The return was an unanimous "we dare". So we went back to tell General Wan our decision. An arrangement was made for us to meet a Colonel Lam Wai-tsoi, the Commanding Officer of our forces at the front. It happened that Colonel Lam came in town with his wife the next day to see a play. In those days the city was so crowded with ever increasing refugees that one could hardly find any place to stay on land. Boats were turned into hotels. A note of introduction brought us to a boat where Colonel Lam made his temporary residence. We explained our problem. He was surprisingly impressed with our eagerness to get thru the enemy's lines for the sake of carrying on our educational mission. "I am going right back to the front to-morrow," said he, "Here is your chance. Come along with me." We accepted his invitation whole heartily.

In a day's time we did all our packing, hired three boats, and by evening all of us were aboard: women and children, teachers and workmen, old and young - a total of fifty on our adventure ready to cut across the enemy's lines.

It was the 27th of June. The day was clear but hot. Our boats moved slowly down stream with the Commanding Officer's boat leading all the way. After several hours of rowing we came to a village called Chou-tien where our troops were garrisoned. The Commanding Officer went ashore and returned with twenty soldiers in khaki fully armed and six plain clothes men carrying three machine guns - two American and one Russian made. Approximately one third of them boarded each of our three boats with a machine gun set up in front ready to fire at a moment's notice. The children welcomed our new guests with joy. Surveying their arms, they asked all sorts of silly questions. How could these tender ones know that the hearts of their parents were beating ever faster and faster, the closer they approached the enemy's lines.

Another several hours' rowing took us to Loh-Kong where our boats moored under a century-old banyan tree. The village was about a half hour's walk from the river. It is a typical Chinese village, with only a few hundred inhabitants of hard-working farmers. Altho it was very close to the front, the people were hard at work with their usual tasks. in the fields and looked serenely calm, as if indifferent to what was going on nearby. Lo-kong is less than three miles from where two rivers meet. The one which runs from Nam-hung to Kukong is called Ching-kong, the other from Yen-fa to the same city, Lam-kong. The enemy had been recently using the Ching-kong a lot for transportation but so far has not yet attempted to come up the Lam-kong. At the junction of the two rivers is Kong Hou (literally, mouth of the two rivers) long since fallen into enemy's hands. It was here that we had to cross the first enemy's line.

Our plan was to rush thru the enemy's line that very mid-night under moon-light. But bad weather spoiled our venture. No sooner had our boats been anchored at Lo-kong than a thunder-storm broke out. Rain in torrents poured down. Though the force of storm soon subsided a drizzle continued throughout the night. We hesitated to proceed. But the Commanding Officer would not let us down. He had made arrangement for us to meet the leaders of the guerrillas at their headquarters in a temple hidden under heavy cover of trees on the right bank of the Ching-kong. Accordingly under dim moonlight peeping thru rolling clouds amidst rain, our boats set rowing down-stream. All lights on the boats were out, as a precautionary measure against detection on the part of the enemy's guards. Every one looked solemn with no desire to talk. Conversations only about urgent matters were carried on in undertone. As soon as the boats entered Kong-hou, they were anchored on the right bank and took shelter under thick bushes. The headquarters of the guerrillas was on top of the hill. I had to climb up the hill to ask for the twenty farmers whom the Commanding Officer had hired for us to carry our luggage. It was so muddy and slippery after the heavy rain that I fell down several times. We reached the top to find a badly-shelled temple where the leaders of the guerrillas and farmer-coolies were waiting. But the number of porters was far less than expected, and even they refused to join in our march. They thought of us as fools. Indeed, they who knew the topography so well were in a far better position than we to realize the danger of our adventure on such a damp and wet night. Quietly listening to their complaints and grumbles, camouflaged in such tactful languages so as not to antagonize the uniformed men behind me, I found there was a lot of wisdom in their words and a kindness in their hearts. I took their words seriously and tried to figure out in my own mind what should be the right thing to do now - to halt or to go on? In the meanwhile, we waited patiently for the rain to stop. But hour after hour went by and there was not the slightest hope! The armed force insisted on carrying out their orders and brought pressure upon me to start right away. Dawn was breaking on the eastern horizon. For our safety's sake I resolved to withdraw. I promised the soldiers to shoulder all the responsibility for failing to carry out the orders. I immediately drew up a letter of apology to the Commanding Officer and handed it to the corporal. I took command myself and ordered the boats about-face. We must get back to Lo-kong before daybreak. The enemy's boats might appear at any minute and discover our whereabouts.

The next day the river swelled enormously. Then it was the turn of the boatmen to refuse to move. The Commanding Officer, however, apologetically left with his men on a sailing boat to seek adventure down-stream. His was an ever daring soul. With them gone, I heaved a sigh of relief, for I had kept the thought to myself for some time that if in our march the presence of soldiers were discovered the enemy would surely start shooting. Otherwise they might leave us alone as common folks. Who knows?

Just about an hour after the soldiers left, an exchange of gun shots intermingled with machine gun and rifle fire was thundering aloud in echoes. It lasted for more than fifteen minutes. We knew there must be a fight some-where down-stream. News came back late that afternoon. This was what happened while the Commanding Officer's boat was sailing down-stream on the Shing-kong, about a hundred enemy's boats were also sailing down-stream from Nam-hang full of loot and booty. The blowing of a horn as a signal of their approach gave the Commanding Officer ample time to steer his boat up into a creek and sent his men ashore. They fired at the enemy's boats inflicting severe damages. Shots were returned and one of their men got hit. How exciting the story! So much so that we felt more worried - we who still had the enemy line to cross.

On the third day the river had subsided considerably. The sky was clear; a light breeze made those of us cramped in boats feel more comfortable; a bright moon could be expected. We decided to move on. We paid a cordial visit to the village elders, requested them to hire for us luggage carriers offering a handsome sum of money, and also a good midnight meal at the temple where they went the first night. Arrangements were made, at the same time, with the leaders of the guerrillas, to send us two guards disguised in plain-clothes to lead the way across the enemy's lines. Every precaution was repeated as on the first venture. Due to some unexpected delays our boats did not get across the Shing-kong until dawn. While we were in mid-stream, we heard unmistakably the sound of a blowing horn. It was a signal: the enemy's boats were approaching. No sooner had we landed on the sand beach at the opposite shore than some one yelled down from the top of the hill, "Enemy boats are coming! Why the hell don't you Lingnan folks move faster! Get into the bush, quick! You want life or death?" Onward we rushed into the thickets without losing a moment. We kept on moving without looking backward in rapid strides deep into the forest lying before us. About fifteen minutes later gunshots were heard. The enemy had fired at the guerrillas on shore from their boats but they had not landed. We were safe, however, in getting thru the first enemy's line. But uncertainty still loomed ahead of us, because there was yet the highway to cross. This highway ran from Nam-hung to Kukong - the main thoroughfare for the enemy to transport troops both ways. For protection against guerrillas' molestation, pill boxes had been built by the enemy at cardinal points along the road. After climbing over the famous "Mt. Five-horses-returning-to-stable" in an hour's walk, we came to the southern slope. Looking downward, the highway was in sight. Our guerrilla friends had sent scouts in advance to keep eyes on the movement of the enemy along the road. They waved their hands signalling that there was no enemy cars running either way. We rushed down the hill in a long queue; out cross the highway diagonally; ran up another hill and down again into a tiny village lying hidden in the heart of thick trees. Not until then were we out of danger. We sat ourselves down for a full rest. It was still early morning. We asked the villagers to prepare for us some tea. We had carried with us some food for breakfast. While we were sipping our tea cheerfully we heard the rumbling noise of military vehicles. The enemy was unquestionably on the highway. We had just made a narrow escape!

Two nights before, we were told, a band of several hundred enemy troops marched down the highway at dawn toward Kukong. Had not the rising tide kept our boats at Lo-kong, we would have been completely lost. We reached Fung-wan that evening - leaving the enemy now far away. Long afterwards we learnt that a servant employed as a carrier by some one among ourselves was captured by the enemy on his return trip to Kong-hou the following day in the village where we sipped our tea. We also learnt that the two villages where we took refuge for several months were pillaged by the enemy exactly one month after we had left. The patriotic farmers put up a courageous fight. Several of them got killed and many were wounded. We had always the good luck, it seemed to avoid all possible disasters in the risk of time. Thank God! So here we are back to our beloved campus in Canton!

INFORMATION BLANK

CHINA CHRISTIAN COLLEGES ALUMNI

The main contribution of the Christian Colleges is their alumni. And one of the most effective and graphic stories we in America, who are trying to get financial support for your alma mater, have to tell is the story of our alumni and the contribution they are now making in their chosen field of endeavor. You, as one of these alumni, are part of that story.

But to tell this story we need much more detailed information about you and our other graduates than we now have in our files. So we are asking all of you who are now working in China to fill out the enclosed information blank and return it to us as promptly as possible.

INFORMATION BLANK

CHINA CHRISTIAN COLLEGES ALUMNI

The main contribution of the Christian Colleges is their alumni. And one of the most effective and graphic stories we in America, who are trying to get financial support for your alma mater, have to tell is the story of our alumni and the contribution they are now making in their chosen field of endeavor. You, as one of these alumni, are part of that story.

But to tell this story we need much more detailed information about you and our other graduates than we now have in our files. So we are asking all of you who are now working in China to fill out the enclosed information blank and return it to us as promptly as possible.

31. WHERE WERE YOU AND WHAT DID YOU DO DURING THE WAR?

I was called to serve Lingnan at the out-break of the war. I worked for its going on running during the eight years' refugee period in Hongkong, in Kukong and in Meikhsien. I had to start the University all over again when Canton, Hongkong, Kukong were captured by Japanese. We had to take care of hundreds of young students and staff family members and attended to their illness and suffering at each evacuation. It was tremendous difficult piece of work. I traveled most time in free China to get support from friends and government. I also helped the isolated churches and Christian schools to get aids from outside. <sup>in eastern part Kwangtung</sup>

32. PLEASE TELL BRIEFLY ABOUT ANY UNUSUAL EXPERIENCES YOU HAVE HAD - FOR EXAMPLE: WERE

YOU INTERNED, CAPTURED, BOMBED, ETC? THESE EXPERIENCES NEED NOT BE LIMITED TO MILITARY ACTIVITIES.

I had many thrilling experiences in evacuations during the war. The one from Hong Kong was most striking. Knowing that my name <sup>was</sup> on the blacklist I took my escape at the risk of my life. It was on the New Year's Day 1942 in the evening when the Japanese soldiers were having celebration and took less attention to keep watch shooting anyone who tried to go across the sea to get away. Six persons in a tiny boat stole to get across. Winds and waves roared up like hills at high sea. Water rushed in through a leak. While the boatmen were rowing on in the foaming sea we kept on pouring water out from the boat lest it should sink down. We might get killed by shooting or shipwreck at any moment. After many hours of sailing we got to Kowloon at last. The next day I dressed myself up like a coolie and carried my luggage with a bamboo pole into which I had hid two hundred dollars for safe-keeping. I got my refugee permit from the Japanese authority to leave H.K. under a false name. At each station on the high way I was questioned by garrisons. I had to be very careful in answering their questions. I might get myself into trouble and be arrested if found suspicious. I had to pass several such stations and keep my courage up and be calm at each inspection. Once we came to a rough bridge where some soldiers were doing repairing work. We were stopped to go on and were ordered to help in their work. Some one tried to run away an angry Jap snatched my pole to beat them. Just as we started to work an officer came along. He set us free. I took to my heels without bothering for my bamboo pole. It took two days walking on foot in the no-man's land. At the third day my feet blistered and could not advance any further. My comrade got me a saddle chair by which I got to a village in Free China. In a village inn I slept my first sound sleep which I never had for a month since war broke out in H.K. I rested several days in Tung Koon district and proceeded to Kai-kong to plan to reopen school there.

36. WHERE WERE YOU AND WHAT DID YOU DO DURING THE WAR?

In the War time I taught in Union Theological College, in Ta-Lee (大里) west of Yunnan Prov. and came back to Hongkong, taught in Pei-Yung Middle School, and went back to my native country after the Pacific War, and then went up to Kuk-Kong, north Kwongtung Prov., taught in Lingnan U. and escaped from Kuk-Kong to Tungkong, East part of Kwongtung Province.

37. PLEASE TELL BRIEFLY ABOUT ANY UNUSUAL EXPERIENCES YOU HAVE HAD. FOR EXAMPLE, WERE YOU INTERNED, CAPTURED, BOMBED, ETC?

One time at Kuk-Kong, a bomb bombed on ~~my~~ the front, just six feet distance, a stone fell on my head, but fortunately I did not hurt ~~much~~ <sup>much</sup>. During the occupation I was at Fun-Won (粉圍). All my luggage and money were taken by the Japanese soldiers, I was forced to help them carry their belongings.

36. WHERE WERE YOU AND WHAT DID YOU DO DURING THE WAR?

Followed the general plan of Lingnan University from Canton to Hongkong 1938 to 1941; then to Kueikang, Kwangtung 1942 to 1944. Helped to open the Medical College and the university in these two places and teach Biochemistry & Physiology. At last helped National Central Hospital at Chungking to organize the clinical laboratories.

37. PLEASE TELL BRIEFLY ABOUT ANY UNUSUAL EXPERIENCES YOU HAVE HAD.

FOR EXAMPLE, WERE YOU INTERNED, CAPTURED, BOMBED, ETC? Continued the

teaching plan at Basement of the Medical College Building 1937 to 1938 when Japanese planes bombed the city of Canton. Evacuated from Canton in October 1938 just two days before the fall of Canton. In December 1941 when Hongkong was attacked I was strangled with my family members in Hongkong both during the attack and after the fall. There was shortage of food and fuel, etc. We were not captured or interned and tried to find opportunity to escape from Hongkong as soon as transportation was available, and finally we succeeded to leave Hongkong in March 1942 and went through all sorts of difficulties and finally we reached Kueikang in June just to catch in time for the reopening of Lingnan University when I was appointed as Dean of Education so as to keep up the continuation of the University until the most suitable person was available.
