INTRODUCTION

Just as the European War in the West has caused people to doubt the value of Western culture, so the Japanese invasion has made the thinking Chinese to question their civilization. Just as the world-wide economic depression has made people in the West perplexed about the soundness of the Western economic system, so the economic dislocation during the past few years in China has directed the attention of the Chinese people to the backwardness of their economic organization, and given the inspiration to strive for a better order.

It is in this spirit of self-criticism that the following pages are written with a view to helping those who have laboured for and are interested in the College to see that their efforts are not spent in vain, and whether the policies and programme of the College are on the right track in meeting the needs and aspirations of the Chinese people during these years of national reconstruction.

The College of Public Affairs, as will be seen in the following pages, became a University College only in 1929, although the beginning of its work as a separate department may be traced back to 1918, the time when Yenching University was established. During this brief span of time the College has gathered together on the staff a group of well qualified young men and women of noble purpose, and has graduated 370 students. The high quality of their work with its three-fold emphasis on teaching, research, and participation in actual movements has made one feel that an experiment such as this has a permanent value in helping to build up a new China. There is nothing more urgent and important in China today than "to contribute to the understanding of the nature and problems of modern political and Economic life and the legal institutions which serve them, and to train men and women for the great task of so directing the new movements in China as to secure the speediest realization of the highest national ideals". Such is the aim of the College. Judging from the results of the past few years we are glad to say that this aim is being steadily realized. A good foundation has already been laid, and we look forward to the tasks of the future and its ever-widening opportunities with confidence.

Historical Review

The Social Sciences as represented by Economics and Sociology have had a history as long as Yenching itself. Mr. J. B. Taylor (Professor of Economics) joined the University in 1918, and taught the first courses in Economics. For some time sociology and social work did not have a full time teacher, but the courses were taught by social workers in Peking, and especially by Mr. J. S. Burgess of Princeton-in-Peking and the Peking Y. M. C. A., who became a part-time lecturer on the staff of the University.

The active interest and support of Princeton-in-Peking in the social work programme, and their support both in funds and personnel has been an important factor in the development of the social sciences in Yenching. In the President's Annual Report for the year 1921-22 we read of the interest of Princeton <sup>in Peking</sup> University in establishing a School of Social and Political Science in Yenching University. "This is in effect an enlargement of that mission which has hitherto functioned through the Y. M. C. A. and in which we have been sharing by the generous permission to have Mr. Burgess act as Head of our Department of Sociology".

In 1923 Dr. Shuhsi Hsu joined the University, and two courses were offered in Political Science, and in 1925 a special catalogue was issued by the Department of Political Science offering major work for a degree.

The President's Report of 1924-25 states "We are encouraged in the hope that Princeton-in-Peking will be able to enlarge by degrees the Departments of Economics, Political Science and Sociology, and feel extremely grateful for the assistance in a group of related subjects than which scarcely any others could be more appreciated by our students".

Courses in Jurisprudence were included in the work offered by the Department of Political Science until 1930, when in order to comply with Government regulations a separate department was formed under the Chairmanship of Judge Yuo. Judge Yuo had joined the University as a part-time lecturer in the Department of Political Science in 1924, and became a full-time Professor in 1926.

In 1930 a change was effected in the organization of the co-operating body in America. Princeton-in-Peking became the Princeton-Yenching Foundation Incorporated. This is composed of a group of prominent alumni and members of the faculty of Princeton University. ~~xxxxxxx~~ present support is confined to the three departments of Political Science, Economics and Sociology. Yenching University is very appreciative of this co-operation and connection with one of the best known ~~xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx~~

This Foundation, while having no formal connection with Princeton University has the endorsement of the Board of Trustees for its programme of work. For the present support is confined to the three departments of Political Science, Economics, and Sociology. Yenching University is very appreciative of this co-operation and connection with one of the best known of American Universities, and trusts that experience will show that the plan has been mutually helpful.

The members of the Board of Trustees of the Princeton-Yenching Foundation are as follows:

In the summer of 1928 a generous gift of G.$140,000 was received from an American Foundation, the money to be spread over a period of seven years, beginning on July 1st, 1928. At the same time arrangements were completed with the Princeton-Yenching Foundation whereby the contribution which had previously supported the Peking Y.M.C.A. would now be turned over to Yenching University, the support of the foreign staff of the Peking Y.M.C.A. work in the future being provided by the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. of the United States. The conditions of both grants were that the money must be used within the group of social sciences. It was now possible to engage more teachers to meet the demands of the students who were flocking to the departments teaching social science subjects, and to plan a programme of work and research for several years ahead.

Resident Committee By recent action of the Princeton-Yenching of the Princeton- Foundation a Resident Committee in China has been Yenching Foundation. formed. This Committee will act in an advisory and helpful relationship to the Board of Managers of Yenching University in their direction of the College of Public Affairs and the Department of Sociology. It also represents the 100-57-57-00-1-500

Princeton-Yenching Foundation in China and will serve in a liaison capacity between Yenching and the Princeton interests. Dwight W. Edwards, Princeton '04, is the Executive Secretary, and Dr. James Y. C. Yen, M.A. Princeton '20, and Dr. Lennig Sweet, Princeton ~~1916~~ '16, are serving on its committee.

Committee on a School of Applied Social Sciences The work of the Departments was at first carried on by a Committee on a School of Applied Social Sciences composed of the Chairman of the three departments, the President of the University, and the secretary of the Advisory Committee, until January 1929. Then regulations issued by the Ministry of Education made it necessary to reorganize the undergraduate work of the University into three separate undergraduate Colleges, one of which should be a College of Social Sciences.

College of Applied Social Sciences Accordingly a College of Applied Social Sciences was formed, with Dr. Leonard S. Hsu as first Dean. On the resignation of Dr. Hsu in April ~~xxxxx~~ Professor J. B. Tayler carried on the work as Acting-Dean until the elections were held in June. At that time Dr. Shuhsi Hsu was elected as Dean for the academic year of 1929-30, and was re-elected for a further two years period in May 1930.

College of Public Affairs In July 1929 new regulations from the Ministry of Education made it necessary to change the name to Fa Hsueh Yuan in Chinese, and also to add as soon as possible a Department of Jurisprudence. This department was added in the academic year of 1930-31, and in order to conform better with the meaning of the new Chinese name the name of the College in English was altered to College of Public Affairs.

In the Spring of 1932 Dr. Shuhsi Hsu found it necessary to resign from the office of Dean owing to his many duties in connection with the North-Eastern Foreign Relations Commission, and the visit of the League of Nations Commission of Enquiry. At the request of the Chancellor Mr. Gideon Chen agreed to act as Dean until the biennial elections in June. Dr. Shuhsi Hsu was again re-elected in June, but as he had been requested by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to proceed to Geneva as technical adviser to Dr. W. W. Yen at the Autumn Meetings of the League he was not able to accept. Mr. Gideon Chen was therefore elected as Dean of the College for the two academic years 1932-34.

The present regulations of the Ministry of Education require Transfer of the Department of Sociology & Social Work that a Department of Sociology shall be in the College of Arts; therefore the Department of Sociology and Social Work was transferred to the College of Arts and Letters in the Summer of 1932. Although this arrangement is not so satisfactory as keeping the social sciences in one compact group it is hoped that the close correlation which has existed in the ~~xxxx~~ past will be still maintained.

The Future Prospects of the College.

(The following statement is merely an expression of my personal conviction, and therefore cannot be taken as the official policy of the College. -- Gideon Chen.)

In reviewing the work of the College of Public Affairs, one cannot but feel that through the untiring and continuous enthusiasm and effort of the staff and friends of the College, past and present, at home and abroad, a good <sup>o</sup> foundation has already been laid. The next question is how to build upon this foundation a more useful College in view of the urgent need of national reconstruction. Any consideration of a policy for the College should bear in mind four main factors in the situation: (1) the vast needs of China; (2) the peculiar position of Yenching University; (3) the limited financial resources; and (4) the pressure of the student body for courses having a vocational nature.

A private institution, unlike the government ones whose duty it is to give general training as comprehensive and universal as possible, should justify its existence by specializing on one or two definite lines of work and thereby making a special contribution to the nation. Looking forward to the needs of China in the immediate future, and bearing in mind the advantages and limitations of Yenching University, the College of Public Affairs should emphasize local and international services in the following five or ten years at least.

The history of the past two decades, as well as the present national crisis in China, has convinced us of the importance of building a new China from the bottom up, that is a programme of town and village development in social, economic, political, legal, educational, and sanitary aspects. Think of the thousands of hsien, and greater number of villages, the special problems of treaty ports and municipalities - a proper development of these local enterprises calls for thousands of well trained pioneers in order to set the wheel into motion. If community service becomes one of the chief points of emphasis in the College of Public Affairs it would involve two things: a thorough and systematic research into a number of well selected types of communities ~~should be made~~; and a correlated teaching programme for the College and certain other departments in other Colleges.

As to the international service, it is believed that China's international relations, political, economic, and legal, are becoming more and more intense, and the needs for expert assistance both in government and business will be increasing. The College of Public Affairs, especially the Department of Political Science, has made a good beginning on this line of work. The time has come for concentrating on and enlarging this particular aspect of our work by a more comprehensive and systematic planning of courses. More attention should be given to the economics phases of international problems. The Department of History may be included in helping to carry out such a programme.

The past effort of the College of Public Affairs has borne its fruit. The future opportunity for making a contribution to China is even greater. What we need now is a definite policy and programme.

The Faculty and their Contribution to Public Affairs in China

Jurisprudence Department

Judge M. Y. K. Kuo was from 1922 to 1925 of Judge of the Supreme Court of China. He has also held the following government positions:

DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMICS - YENCHING UNIVERSITY.

Work in Rural Economics.

The Department has endeavored to meet the strong and growing interest in rural reconstruction, which is manifest in many quarters. In addition to a general course in this field, some more specialized study has been carried on with senior and graduate students on a seminar basis. Attention has been given to the subject of landholding and agrarian movements. Many students have written their senior thesis in regard to some rural topic. Sometimes this has taken the form of a regional study, and others of some local industry or marketing situation. Co-operative study was made in regard to egg production and egg consumption in the neighborhood of the University. Considerable attention has been given to research, especially in the marketing of agricultural products in the Province of Hopei. This study includes the organization of marketing, the movement of prices and the costs of marketing. Good progress has been made with it, and publication is shortly expected.

Another emphasis has been on rural co-operation. Members of the Department have shared in the activities of the Famine Relief Commission in the organization of rural credit societies on the Raffeisen plan, and local situations are being studied as to the possibility of introducing other forms of agricultural co-operation, especially marketing.

During the current year, the most significant development has been in the field of rural industries. Two members of the Department were requested at the end of 1929 to make a special study of subsidiary industries which the farmer might carry on in his village, or even in his own home. The study of the situation in North China has emphasized the importance of this method of increasing the financial resources of the villages, since farming is very largely a part-time industry, and because of climatic conditions and uncertain support. The studies made by the Department are leading to experiment, which is being carried on in association with the National Christian Council. It is believed to be desirable that permanent provision should be made for the promoting of scientific and co-operative rural industry, and in this connection that a Rural Industries Institute should be founded under the auspices of the University.

Memorandum

MEMORANDUM TO THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE
OF THE SCHOOL OF APPLIED SOCIAL SCIENCES
FOR THE BOARD OF MANAGERS, YENCHING UNIVERSITY.

(A brief outline of the present and future plans of the Department of Sociology and Social Work in Yenching University, Peiping, China.)

At the present time, the Department of Sociology and Social Work in Yenching University offers undergraduate and graduate work toward (a) B. A. in Sociology, (b) B. A. and Vocational Certificate in Social Work, (c) M. A. in Sociology, (d) M. A. and Vocational Certificate in Social Work, (e) Vocational Certificate in Social Work, and (f) cooperating with the School of Religion in Yenching University, B.D. and Vocational Certificate in Christian Social Work. In addition, the Department cooperates with the School of Religion in a one year Short Course for Religious and Social Workers, leading to a certificate, and with Yenching College for Women in a Correspondence Reading Course, leading to a certificate.

During the present year, there are approximately 50 major students having elected Sociology as their major, and 250 students registered in various Sociology classes. A detailed report concerning the work of the Department in 1927-28 and its further plans may be found in the Publication of the Department, Series B, No. 13, (Exhibit A.)

The courses offered in the Department are conveniently divided into four groups: (1) those relating to anthropology and race relations, (2) those relating to Social Theory, e.g. History of Social Thought, Chinese Social Philosophy, Social

Ethics, Rural Sociology, Social Progress, and Contemporary Social Theories; (3) those relating to Social Problems and Social Survey, e.g., Chinese Social Problems, Poverty and Poor Relief, Public Health, Recreation and Play, Community Organization and Problems, Criminology and Penology, Population, Sex Sociology, and Social Legislation; and (4) those relating to Social Work, e.g., Case Work Methods, Medical Social Service, Boys' Work, Girls' Club Work, and Industrial Welfare Work.

In addition, the Department offers courses in practical field work for students taking Social Work training. At present, the Department offers opportunities for the following types of field work: Boys' Club Work, Community Organization, Family Case Work, Hospital Social Service, Industrial Welfare Work, Playground Work, Public Health and Social Survey. This program of field work has been made possible by the social institutions of Peking and elsewhere in China cooperating with the University in training the students to know how to do social work. All Social students are required to spend one year in the field, in addition to the regular classroom work.

Regarding the future plans of the Department, in the first place, we wish to work towards building a strong Graduate Research Department. We are offering more research courses this year than in previous years. We have decided to make a social survey of Ching Ho, a Chinese town, three miles northeast of the University campus, and half of Professor Cato Yang's time has been set aside to direct this survey. Moreover, Mr. Fang Fu An, Assistant in the Department, is to spend this year in organizing a Sociology Library along the line of source materials for research.

We look forward also toward more publications. A part of Professor L. Hsu's time is given to the editing of the Sociological World, the annual journal devoted to Chinese Social Thought and Social Problems, published by the Department. This journal is now the only scientific periodical in Sociology. Plans for compiling a Chinese dictionary of sociological terms, and for translating foreign authoritative sociological treatises are under consideration.

In addition to research and publication, we wish to strengthen the Social Work program in the Department. Yenching University is now the only institution which offers a Social Work course of collegiate grade. A half time worker has been added to the Staff this year to direct our case work. We expect next year a full time teacher in Social Service administration will be added. As research throws more light upon Chinese social conditions, social work technique specifically suited to the needs of China will be studied and developed. Already we see that community work, mass education, case work, rural work, correctional work, and relief work, requires Chinese technique which can be acquired only through research and experience.

Plans are being made to establish a Sociological Laboratory, either in the form of a settlement house, or in the form a community center in the near future.

Then we look forward to strengthening our Anthropological program. In the summer of 1928, an Anthropological Expedition under the auspices of the Department was sent to Foochow, and the work was brought to a successful end. The report of this Expedition will soon be published. The vast wealth of archaeological and anthropological materials in China, when unearthed, will be extremely valuable to the future of sociological science. We hope that later on a full time man in Anthropology be added to the Staff.

It is fitting to add here that we were fortunate to secure the cooperation of the Department of Chinese in the University, which due to the Harvard-Yenching arrangement, has a strong staff in research and instructional work along the history of Chinese Social Thought and Comparative Thought between the East and the West.

In conclusion, the fact that Sociology is an important need in the process of national reconstruction in China is now universally recognized. For that reason, the position of the Yenching Department of Sociology in the Chinese academic world has become more and more significant. In order to build up a strong Chinese Sociology Department, two things must be done, - first research into Chinese social thought, and second, research of modern social conditions in China. In addition to these two types of work, the technique of social work and social survey must be built up. These are the objectives towards which the Department has been working during the last few years.

The present staff in the Department of Sociology includes four full time teachers for the year, two full time teachers for semesters, a half time teacher, one full time and two part time assistants, one full time research assistant, and seven special lecturers who offer one course at a time. The oldest member in length of service on the staff is Professor John Stewart Burgess. Dr. Burgess received his B. A. Degree in 1905 from Princeton University, M. A. in 1909, and Ph. D. in 1928, from Columbia University. He first came to Yenching in 1919. Meanwhile, he was secretary of the Peking Y. M. C. A. from 1909 to 1925. He is widely known in China as the co-author with S. D. Gamble of Peking, a Social Survey, and as the promoter of a number of social work projects in Peking. His doctoral dissertation, The Guilds of Peking, will be off the press in the fall of 1928.

The next person from the standpoint of length of service in the Department is Leonard Hsu, who first came to Yenching in 1924. Dr. Hsu received his early classical education from the late Hon. Liu Jen-hsi, one time governor of Hunan, and Hsieh Wei-yu, author of many books on Confucianism. He received his secondary education in government and private schools, B.A. from Stamford, M. A. and Ph. D. from Iowa. In 1923-24, he was lecturer in Chinese Political Ideas at the University of Iowa. He returned in 1924 to join the Commission of Educational Reorganization of the Hupeh Government. In July, 1924, he joined Yenching as lecturer in Sociology, and in 1927, he was elected Chairman of the Department.

The same year, he was appointed Technical Advisor to the Nationalist Government on Foreign Affairs and Labor and Rural Questions. He is the author of Political Philosophy of Confucianism, Chinese Population Problems (in Chinese) Sociology Bibliography (in Chinese) and Essays on Social Reconstruction in China. He was the Editor-in-Chief on the Chinese Journal of Sociology in 1925-26.

Miss V. K. Nyi joined the Department in the fall of 1927 as instructor. Miss Nyi received her A. B. from Smith College, and A. M. from the University of Chicago. In 1926-27, she was instructor in Sociology in Ginling College.

Miss Jane Newell joined Yenching the second semester of 1927-28 as Visiting Professor. Miss Newell received her B. A. from Wellesley College, her M. A. and Ph. D. from Wisconsin. She is preparing a book with Professor E. A. Ross on Sex Sociology. She is making a study of the Women's Movement in America and Europe. She was professor of Economics and Sociology in Wellesley College during the years of 1919-1927, and Chairman of the Department in the years of 1919-1923.

Dr. Cato Yang has just joined Yenching this year as Assistant Professor. Dr. Yang received his early education in Government Schools and Yale-in-China. He did his undergraduate work in Ames, and graduate work in Michigan State College. He is considered one of the most brilliant Chinese students in America in Rural Sociology. In 1927-1928, he was Technician in the Ministry of Agriculture and Mining of the Nanking Government.

Mr. Yen Yang Chang joined Yenching University this year as Instructor. He received his B. A. and M. A. degrees from the University of Southern California, and has studied one year in France.

Mr. Wu Wen Tsao is expected to arrive the second semester. Mr. Wu, a Tsing Hua graduate, is considered one of the most brilliant students in Columbia. He is a graduate of Tsing Hua College, Dartmouth, B. A., and will receive his Ph. D. in Sociology at Columbia this fall. He is one of the translators of H. G. Wells Outlines of History.

Mr. H. C. Yu, our research associate, is a Yenching graduate of 1925. He received his M. A. degree from Colgate, and did one year of graduate work in Harvard University. Since his return, he has been a member of the Municipal Bureau of Public Health in Peiping. Through special arrangement with the Director of the Health Bureau, we were able to get Mr. Yu for one year for the field survey in Ching Ho which we have chosen as a representative town for our research work.

The assistants include Mr. Fang Fu-An and Mr. Yen Ching Yueh. Both of them graduated from Yenching in 1928, and were among the first highest five in the graduating class. Miss Chou Li-chin, a half-time assistant in case work, was a graduate from Shanghai College. Since her graduation, she had several years of practical experience in social work, and has had one year of case work experience on the Social Service Department of the P. U. M. C.

Our Special Lecturers include Dr. J. B. Grant, Professor of Public Health, P. U. M. C., Miss Ida Fruitt, head of the Department of Medical Social Service, P. U.M.C., and Mr. R. I. Forbes, a member of the staff of Princeton-in-Peking, and head of the Department of Physical Education in the Y. M. C. A.

In addition several members from other departments of Yenching University are giving courses in the Department of Sociology. They are Professor Andrew Cheng of the School of Religion, Professor Hsu Ti Shan of the Department of Chinese, Maxwell Stewart of the Department of English, and Miss Wood from the School of Religion.

- ii. sociological field research
- iii. public administration including social, economic and political.

c. To resume the publication of the two journals

- i. Sociological World (Chinese) She Hui Hsueh Chieh
- ii. The Yenching Journal of Social Studies (English)

d. To strengthen the work of Child Welfare Training Program

e. To extend the present "research village" into a larger field for the training of students in field research.

7. Brief History: About 1922, a group of Princeton Alumni including S. D. Gamble, J. S. Burgess and Dwight Edwards together with a British Professor, Mr. J. B. Tayler gathered together and decided to establish the Departments of Sociology (and Social Work) and Economics. With Dr. Shuhsi Hsu, <sup>who</sup> came back from America a few years later, the Department of Political Science was established.

The three departments grow very rapidly with more funds coming from Princeton friends in America and since 1928 with the support of the Laura Spellman Rockefeller fund, a program of five years was proposed and later carried out. Ch'ingho Experimental Station was established for students in Sociology and Social Work under the leadership of Leonard S. Hsu. The Political Science Department under the leadership of Shuhsi Hsu made important studies on the North-eastern provinces of China which served the national course very well when in 1931 the Manchurian Incident broke out. Prof. J. B. Tayler made a series of studies of rural economy.

At the end of the five year program, from 1934 on until the summer of 1937, the Rockefeller Foundation gave support to the rural reconstruction program in China, of which the Yenching College of Public Affairs was an active participant.

From 1937 to 1941, the first period of China's war of resistance, the College continued receiving support from both Princeton-Yenching Foundation and the Rockefeller Foundation. A "research village" was established for students in Sociology and Economics. During this period, the College published the Yenching Journal of Social Studies, in addition to the Sociological World (in Chinese) which was an annual publication by the Department of Sociology and Social Work since 1927.

In the Spring of 1942, Yenching was reestablished in Chengtu. The College had a greater share of the student body with more than 1/3 of the total.

In Fall 1946, Chengtu came back to Peiping and rapidly the College is recovering from the war effects.

8. The Visits of Scholars from Foreign Lands

Professor E. S. Corwin of Princeton University was visiting professor of the Political Science Department in 1928. Professor R. E. Park of the University of Chicago was visiting professor of the Department of Sociology for a brief period in 1930 and for one year, 1932-33. Dr. A. R. Radcliffe-Brown, a known British professor of Anthropology, was visiting professor of the Department of Sociology in 1935-36. Professor H. D. Lasswell of the University of Chicago lectured for one semester in the Spring of 1938. Professors Herbert Miller<sup>(1928)</sup> of the University of Ohio and Professor E. S. Bogardus<sup>(1926)</sup> paid the College a brief visit.

Yenching College of Public Affairs
November, 1947

The Three Administrative Departments:- The College of Public Affairs has three departments to take care academic administration, namely, Economics, Political Science and Sociology, with the latter including Social Administration, Social Anthropology and Community Studies.

The Child Welfare Training Program:- The Child Welfare Training Program is a special training program. It is a cooperative project of four academic departments in three colleges, namely, Home Economics of Natural Sciences, Education and Psychology of Arts and Letters, and Sociology of Public Affairs. The project is mainly financed by the United Service to China, Inc. of America. The director of the Program is Professor Kit-king Lei who is a member of the Department of Sociology. At the present, Sociology is taken as the center of the training program. There is a field station in the local community with the idea to learn through service. The station is the place where students and faculty members meet the village folks and understand their problems.

Personnel of the Academic Departments:- Before the war, each academic department had four to five members. At present, the Department of Political Science has three members. Dr. Agnes Ch'en is the Chairman of this Department. Her line of specialization is international relations and diplomacy. The other two full-time members are Professor Chang Hsi-t'ung and Dr. Ho Kuo-liang with their lines of specialization in comparative governments and political theories respectively. In addition, a part-time professor is engaged to take care the course in civil laws.

The Department of Sociology is headed up by Dr. Lin Yueh-hua whose specialty is social anthropology. The other members of the Department include Dr. Yen Ching-yueh in law and social change, Professor Kit-king Lei in social administration, and Dr. Chao Ch'eng-hsin in population and community studies. In addition, Dr. Chang Hsueh-yen is lecturing on "the principles of social reconstruction" on a voluntary basis.

The Department of Economics has Professor Tsui Shu-hsiang as the full-time member. Her line of specialization is mathematical economics. The Chairman of the Department, Dr. Cheng Lin-chuang, is on leave for one year to refresh himself in Columbia University. During his absence, Dr. Chao Ch'eng-hsin, the Dean of the College, is the acting Chairman. The other members are on part-time basis with Dr. Chao Jen-chun in money and banking, Professor Chao Hsi-yü in accounting, Dr. Ch'en Chen-han in economic history, and Professor Jao Yü-su in international trade and public finance.

Before the war, the College had adopted the Oxford Greats System for honour students and had Mr. Michael Lindsay and Mr. George Taylor in the staff in Economics and Political Science. It is hoped that in the not too distant future, two British members may be added to the College to strengthen our academic program.

Two senior members are on leave at the present academic year. Dr. Shuhsi Hsu is now with the Chinese delegation in the United Nations Organization. Dr. W.T. Wu is with the Chinese delegation in Tokyo. It is hoped that they may be able to return to the College when our national government can afford to release them. Another member of the College is Professor J. B. Tayler who is now retired and lives in England. Professor Tayler had been serving the Department of Economics for nearly twenty years.

✓ The College Library:- The College has a library of its own. It is undoubtedly the best of its kind in China. There is a special fund to purchase books in Sociology. Economics and Political Science are, however, not so fortunate. They have to depend upon contributions by friends from time to time. During the war years, the Rockefeller Foundation had contributed a good sum of money for books in Sociology, Economics and Political Science. This year we are fortunate to have the contributions from the British United Aid to China. Before the war, book funds for Economics and Political Science came from the College budget which was chiefly financed by the Princeton Yenching Foundation.

✓ Research:- The Department of Sociology has a "research village" for its faculty and students to learn their techniques of social studies in the field. Faculty and students from Economics and Political Science occasionally share the field experience of the sociologists.

The Department of Economics compiles and publishes its Price Index Series. The project is mainly financed by the United Service to China, Inc. of America. The Department of Political Science is working on Chinese international relations and local government. It is hoped that the research projects of the College Faculty will expand as soon as the College is better staffed.

Publications:- Before the War, the College had two journals with one in Chinese (The Sociological World), and the other in English (The Yenching Journal of Social Studies). It is planned to resume the publication of the Sociological World this year and the Yenching Journal of Social Studies next year. These two journals were well received by the Social Science public at home and abroad before the war. Since the end of the war, friends of the College have expressed their wishes to see their publications again.

I. Development of the Collage

The Yenching College of Public Affairs developed out of the beginnings of a Department of Sociology, which was organized in 1919, when the university was in its second year and still located on a campus in the southeast corner of Peiping city. The active spirits in starting work in sociology were Mr. J. Stuart Burgess and Mr. Sidney D. Gamble of the Peiping YMCA staff. Both these men were Princeton graduates and had the warm approval of Mr. Dwight W. Edwards, also of the Peiping YMCA and Princeton graduates in enlarging Princeton interest in China and the Chinese people, by adding academic work to the interest and support already given by Princeton graduates to the Peiping YMCA. By degrees the Princeton support for Yenching's Department of Sociology was increased. Courses in Economics were added to the university curriculum under the charge of a British professor, Mr. J. B. Tayler, who joined the Princeton representatives in formally establishing two departments, that of sociology and that of economics in the then single men's college of the university. Mr. Burgess became chairman of the former, and Mr. Taylor of the latter. These courses were developed in succeeding years. In 1925 Dr. Shuhsi Hsu returned from studies in America and established a Department of Political Science, with the registration of Yenching under the National Ministry of Education. These three departments were united in the College of Public Affairs.

With more funds coming from Princeton friends in America, the three departments grew very rapidly. More faculty members were invited. The Department of Sociology was expanded into the Department of Sociology and Social Work. Beginning from 1926 both the Department of Political Science, and the Department of Sociology and Social Work received graduate students for advanced studies. With the return of Dr. J. S. Burgess from America in 1928, and the continued keen interest and generous help from the Princeton Alumni, the Princeton-Yenching Foundation was founded, and the College of Public Affairs under the auspices of the Foundation was established, including the above mentioned three departments.

Since 1928, with the support of the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Fund, a program of five years was proposed for the College and carried out. The Chinghe Experimental Station near the university was established for the training of students of Sociology and Social Work under the leadership of Dr. Leonaf S. Hsu. The Department of Political Science under the leadership of Dr. Shuhsi Hsu made important studies on the North-eastern provinces of China, which served the national cause very well when in 1931 the Manchurian Incident broke out. Prof. J. B. Tayler made a series of studies of rural economy.

At the end of the five-year program, from 1934 on until the summer of 1937, the Rockefeller Foundation gave support to the rural reconstruction program in China, in which the Yenching College of Public Affairs was an active participator.

From 1937 to 1941, the first period of China's war of resistance, the College of Public Affairs continued receiving support from the Princeton-Yenching Foundation and the Rockefeller Foundation. A "research village" was established for students in Sociology and Economics. The College also adapted, from the Oxford model, a tutorial course in Modern Greats for honor students.

In the spring of 1942, Yenching was re-established in Chengtu. The College had a large share of the student body with more than one third of the usual total enrollment.

With the capitulation of Japan in 1945, Yenching was the first university to be rehabilitated in North China and classes began in the autumn of the same year. Professor Chao Ch'eng-hsin, who had been imprisoned by the Japanese Army for more than half a year during the war, was asked to head up the College for its rehabilitation. In the fall of 1946, the Chengtu branch of Yenching came back to Peiping, and the College has since then been rapidly recovering from the war effects. This work of rehabilitation and recovery could not have been accomplished without the generous help and encouragement from the Princeton-Yenching Foundation, the United Service to China, the Rockefeller Foundation, and British United Aid to China. At present, the budget of the College has entirely depended upon the Princeton-Yenching Foundation, while the Rockefeller Foundation and other organizations help the College by giving fellowships, special training program and studies, books and other equipment.

II. Activities of the College

In spite of the fact that difficulties created during the war have not been entirely overcome, the three departments of the College have managed to offer more than thirty courses each semester. Most courses have been offered not only for the students of the College but also for those of the whole university. Students in Journalism and History in particular are much benefitted, for they need the background of the social sciences to help their own studies. The three introductory courses in each department are, as usual, open to all university students, and each course has had the enrollment of 100 to 140 students.

The College has offered a Child Welfare Training Program, financed by the United Service to China, for two years (1946-48). But because of recent difficulties in the continuation of this fund, the practical program, including nursery school, kindergarten, and the children's center, had to be closed at the end of the year. But the teaching program will continue as usual under the Department of Sociology and Social Work.

The College has a library of its own. It is undoubtedly the best of its kind in China. Many other libraries of this kind have been unable to keep their books up-to-date, partly because of the destruction caused by the Japanese war, and partly because of the difficulty of buying books on account of the unfavorable foreign exchange. In connection with our College there is a special Josephine Sailer Endowment fund to purchase books on sociology and social work. A book fund for economics and political science has been contributed by British United Aid to China. Funds for economics and political science books came from the College budget, which was chiefly financed by the Princeton-Yenching Foundation.

Before the War, the College had two journals. The Sociological World (in Chinese) was an Annual published by the Department of Sociology and Social Work. The Yenching Journal of Social Studies (in English) has been published semi-annually since 1937. Both journals were well received by the Social Science public at home and abroad, but both of them were forced to stop publication on account of war. This year, with the help of the Princeton-Yenching Foundation, we have resumed their publication. The Sociological World, now called Yenching Social Sciences, has just resumed publication under the auspices of the College of Public Affairs. We expect both these journals to be ready for distribution at the end of this summer.

In the Yenching Journal of Social Studies several prominent articles have been contributed by the faculty members. For example, "A Comparison between Chinese and European Feudal Institutions", by Prof. Ch'i Ssu-ho; "China's Northern Frontiers: Historical Background", by Prof. Agnes Fang-chih Ch'en; "The Apprentices in Ch'engtu during and after the War", by Prof. T'ai-ch'u Liao; "Language Forms and Thought Forms", by Prof. C. W. Luh; "P'ing-chiao-tsun as a Social Laboratory", by Prof. Ch'eng-hsin Chao; and "Adjusting Human Relationships through Social Habits", by Prof. L. C. Porter.

In the Yenching Social Sciences several important articles contributed by the faculty members are as follows: "A Note on China Loan Wors", by Prof. C. W. Luh; "The Semantic Change of the Chinese Language and the Psychological Tendency of the Chinese People", by Prof. Kao Ming-Kai; "Political Thought of the Western Chou Period", by Prof. Ch'i Ssu-ho; "The Codifications during the Mongol-Yuan Period", by Prof. Weng Tu-chien; "The Diffusion of the Doctrine of Separation of Power during the late Ch'ing Dynasty", by Prof. Chang Hsi-tung; "The Development of the Theory of Industrial Location", by Prof. Ch'en Chen-han; "The Progress of Field Investigations in P'ing-chiao-tsun", by Prof. Chao Ch'eng-ksin; "The Living Buddhas of Tibet", by Prof. Li Yu-yi; and "The Family and Marriage of the Giarung in the Border Region of Szechuan and Sikang", by Prof. Lin Yeh-hua.

III. Students and Graduates

This summer we had 46 graduates receiving the B.A. degree, and one post-graduate student received the M.A. degree. Half of them had jobs waiting for them before their graduation. At present more than 92% of our fresh graduates have been successfully employed. In fact, in the field of child welfare, the graduates were offered more jobs than they could possibly take. While most graduates from other universities were unable to find jobs, the graduates from our College had no worry about them. Recently, the King Ch'eng Commercial Bank in Tientsin needed two clerks in the Foreign Exchange Department, and was unable to find suitable ones in spite of numerous applications. Finally, the College of Public Affairs was requested to provide two fresh graduates to fill the vacancies. It indicates that our graduates possess high qualities of academic standing, which few graduates of other universities can compete with.

Another interesting incident to prove the high quality of our graduates was the entrance examination for graduate students of sociology at the National Tsinghua University in the summer of 1947. Two Yenching sociology graduate students took the examination together with a dozen of Tsinghua's own graduates. As a result only the two Yenching students successfully passed the examination.

IV. Services of the Faculty and Alumni of the College to the Nation

Several senior members of the faculty of the College have been unable to return on account of their heavy responsibilities in the National Government. Prof. Shuhsi Hsu is now with the Chinese Delegation in the United Nations Organization. Prof. Min-ch'ao Kuo is the President of the High Court of Shanghai. Prof. W. T. Wu is with the Chinese Delegation in Tokyo. It is hoped that they may be able to return to the College when the National Government can afford to release them.

So far, the College has produced about 800 graduates, who are scattered throughout the country in different fields of service. On account of limited space, we can only mention a few cases as illustration of what they are doing after graduation. For example, Mr. Hung-chün Chang, 1925 class in sociology, has served as Head of the Social Welfare Division in the Ministry of Social Welfare, Nanking, more than ten years. He is in charge of almost all social welfare work rendered by the National Government, and has represented the Chinese Government several times in different international congresses. Mr. Wu Ch'i-yü, 1927 class in Political Science, is councilor of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Mr. Hu Ch'ing-yü, 1930 class of political science, is the Head of the Treaty Division, Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Mr. Ku Tun-jou, 1930 class in Political Science, is Dean of the College of Arts and Letters in Hanchow University. Mr. Fang Tung, Economics, 1928, is the Director of the Bureau of Finance of Fukien Province. Mr. Hsi Ching-hsung, Economics, 1928, is Director of Treasury Bureau of the Central Bank of China. Mr. Li An-che, Sociology, 1929, is Head of the Institute of Frontier Studies, Western China Union University, Ch'engtu. Mr. Li Hsien-shun, Economics, 1928, is Director of Texas of Peiping. Mr. Fei Hsiao-t'ung, Sociology, 1932, is Professor of Sociology, National Tsinghua University, Peiping. Miss Ch'en Wen-hsien, Sociology, 1930, is Head of the Division of Social Administration, Nanking University; and Miss Chou Li-chiu, Sociology, 1930, is professor of Social Work in Nanking University. Mr. Chiang Chi-ang, Sociology, 1934, is professor of Social Work in West China Union University, Ch'engt'u. Mr. Yang Kang-tsu, Economics, 1929, is Manager of the Bank of China, Tsingtao. In fact, the list of positions prominently occupied by our graduates can be prolonged endlessly. But this is enough to show what types of work our graduates are doing throughout the country, and what kind of contribution the College has given to the Nation through its graduates.

V. Foreign Faculty Members and Visitors to the College

The College as a whole has emphasized intercultural studies in respect to their political, legal, economic and social aspects. Before the War foreign faculty members and visitors helped the College tremendously, especially regarding the point of view and methods of studies in intercultural problems. At the beginning, we had Dr. J. S. Burgess as the founder of the Department of Sociology and Mr. J. B. Tayler as the founder of the Department of Economics. Mr. Sidney D. Gamble often lectured to the College regarding the findings of his valuable social research in China. Mr. Maxwell S. Stewart of Public Affairs Pamphlets and Miss Jane Newell of Wellesley were with the faculty of the College in 1927-30, in the Department of Sociology. Prof. E. S. Corwin of Princeton University and Prof. J. S. Burgess of Temple University were visiting professors of the Departments of Political Science and Sociology in 1928. Prof. H. A. Miller of Ohio State University was visiting professor in the Department of Sociology in 1929. Prof. H. B. Woolston of Washington University, Seattle, paid the College a brief visit in 1929. Prof. R. E. Park of the University of Chicago was visiting professor of the Department of Sociology for a brief period in 1930, and for one year in 1932-33. Prof. A. R. Radcliff-Brown, a well known British professor of anthropology was visiting professor of the Department of Sociology in 1933-36. Prof. E. S. Bogardus paid the College a brief visit in 1936. Dr. George Taylor of Washington University taught in the Department of Economics in 1930-34. Mr. Michael Lindsay of Cambridge University joined the College in the Department of Political Science in 1937-41. Prof. H. D. Lasswell of the University of Chicago lectured for one semester in the spring of 1938.

After the War Prof. E. G. Osborne of Teachers College, Columbia University, taught one semester in the spring of 1947 for the Child Welfare Training Program under the auspices of the United Service to China.

The College felt itself fortunate in the past to have foreign faculty members and visitors to inspire both our faculty and student groups. We have tried very hard to invite some visiting professors under the Fulbright Bill for the coming year. But so far we have not been able to get any. It is hoped that we shall succeed in the near future.

VI. Problems and Prospects

The chief difficulty in the College is the deficiency of faculty personnel. Before the war, each department had five or six full-time members. But at present we only have three in each department. So far we have not been entirely successful in overcoming the difficulties caused by the prolonged war. However, with the increasing help from the Princeton-Yenching Foundation and the keen interest of the Rockefeller Foundation, the College is gradually building up its teaching personnel and is looking forward to a research program.

Since the College is emphasizing intercultural studies in respect to their political, legal, economic and social aspects, attempts are being made cooperatively by the three departments to give students a broad outlook and to develop an understanding of the nation's problems in the light of the experiences of western countries.

Besides, the College continues to develop training programs in public administration, international relations, business administration, industrial management and social administration.

In order to achieve the above purpose, the College is planning to conduct a cooperative study of the city of Peiping. We have had an experimental station and a research village. But all the material we collected only explains the village or semi-village life in China. We hope that our three departments can send students to study Peiping in political, economic and social aspects of city life in a cooperative plan. The study will fulfill two objectives. One is to compare city life with village life in North China, while the other is to see the changes that have occurred in city life since Mr. Gamble's "Peking, A Social Survey". Besides, we hope that we may have enough up-to-date data in order to compare Chinese city life with that of the West. It will take several years before we will be able to make a preliminary report of the study. But this study will not only offer a better understanding of Chinese culture, but it will also serve as better training for both faculty and students of the College. If we have a chance to conduct this study, we hope that we will be fortunate enough to get advice from Mr. S. D. Gamble regarding our project, and to ask him to be the chief editor of the report. When we have enough faculty personnel, we will be able to make a start upon the return of Dean Ch'eng-hsin Chao, whose specialization is population and community studies.
