COURSES OF STUDY

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Colleges of Arts and Sciences

Staff for 1925-6

Shuhsi Hsü, Ph. D.....Associate Professor and Head

Leonard Shih-lien Hsü, Ph. D.....Assistant Professor in Sociology

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

The intense interest of the public in the problem of foreign relations of China roused by the Shanghai Incident has motivated the Department to give courses on Diplomacy this academic year that have been announced for the next; and the hearty welcome accorded by students in the University to the courses already offered on Political Science also makes it incumbent upon the Department to acquaint them with what they may expect from it beyond the present year. It is therefore thought advisable to recast the departmental curriculum and formulate a new one. That which is found in Yenching University Bulletin, Volume VII, Number 21, Pages 42-43, is hereby superseded, and students interested in Political Science are requested to consult with the present instead of the last announcement.

DESCRIPTION OF COURSES

Freshmen and sophomores who intend to major in Political Science are advised to elect also courses offered by the Departments of Economics, Geography, History and Sociology, particularly from the following: Economics 1-2; History 11-12, 15-22, 24, 39-59; Geography 3-9, 12; Sociology 1-10, 67-68. Students who desire to have courses chosen from the list below counted towards their major in another department may consult the head of the department concerned. As to courses of other departments that may be offered to the Department for a similar purpose, a list of them will be found at the end of the present announcement.

EXPLANATIONS

Courses marked with an asterisk will not be given in the year 1926-27 (e. g. *Pol. Sc. 101-102).

The college credits assigned to each course are indicated in the space directly following the title of the course (e. g. Credits 2). When the course is a year course the credits for each semester are indicated separately with a hyphen between (e. g. Credits 2-2)

Courses extending throughout the year are indicated by an odd and an even number separated by a hyphen (e. g. Pol. Sc. 1-2). Such course must be taken by students for the whole year in order to obtain credit.

Courses given in the Fall Semester are indicated by odd numbers (e. g. Pol. Sc. 151)

Courses given in the Spring Semester are indicated by even numbers (e. g. P. S. 154).

Courses that may be given either in the Fall or in the Spring Semester, are indicated by an odd and an even number separated by a cross line (e. g. Pol. Sc. 111/112) Announcement is made at the time of registration as to whether such courses are to be given in the Fall or Spring Semester.

Courses numbered from 1-100 are intended chiefly for undergraduates, but graduate students may elect certain of such courses with the approval of the Committee on Graduate Studies and under conditions specified by the Committee.

Courses numbered from 101-200 are intended chiefly for graduate students, but qualified undergraduates may elect such courses with the permission of the Dean.

Courses numbered above 201 are intended exclusively for graduate students.

The figures 1,2,3,4 and 5 indicated freshman, sophomores, juniors, seniors and graduates respectively. Courses are open only to those classes specified.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Colleges of Arts and Sciences

Staff for 1926-27

Shuhsi Hsü, Ph. D Associate Professor & Head
Y. K. Kuo, LL. B. Associate Professor
Louis R. O. Bevan, M. A., LL. B. Lecturer (Honorary)
M. T. Z. Tyau, LL. D. Lecturer

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Department of Political Science announces with great pleasure that Judge Y. K. Kuo, member of the Supreme Court of China, has been appointed Associate Professor of Political Science, and that Mr. Louis R. O. Bevan, veteran professor of the Customs College, and Dr. M. T. Z. Tyau, secretary of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, have consented to lecture in the Department. With the staff thus strengthened, the Department will be able, by alternating the courses listed below each year, to carry as large a program as promised in its last bulletin (Vol. VII, No. 37).

Ever since last fall, when this Department was organized, efforts have been made to collect documents and works in Chinese, English, French and German that have a bearing upon the various branches of Political Science, with a view to the establishment of a more or less independent research library for the Department. It is hoped that before long the Department will be able not only to meet the needs of the advanced students and the members of its staff, but also to contribute its share in the development of an indigenous department of knowledge.

MAJOR STUDIES

(a) Undergraduate

Undergraduates majoring in Political Science are advised to reserve as much as possible of their more mature years in the latter part of their college course for the study of the subject and to take steps in the early years to strengthen themselves in other social sciences, history, and languages. In minoring, they probably can not do better than choosing Economics, or Sociology, or Modern History, a knowledge of any of which will be very helpful to those who are preparing themselves for public service. Credit towards a major in Political Science will be given for Economics 13-14, Money and Banking, and Economics 19-20, Public Finance. As students of Political Science will have to attack ever-changing problems throughout their lives, it is highly desirable that they attend the Seminar, when open to them in their senior year, and familiarize themselves with the methods and technique of research. It may be added that in this Department, as in many others, a majoring undergraduate is required to submit for his or her degree of Bachelor of Arts an essay on such a topic as is approved by the Head of the Department and the Dean of the College to which the student may belong.

(b) Graduate

Students working for the degree of Master of Arts under the supervision of the Department are referred to the rules adopted by the Committee on Graduate Studies.

At present the University does not grant any degree higher than Master of Arts; but any student who desires to continue his or her research work after obtaining that degree, or to receive a course of training in Political Science equivalent to what is given in American universities for the doctorate, may register in the University as a special graduate student, after consultation with the Head of the Department and the Chairman of the Committee on Graduate Studies.

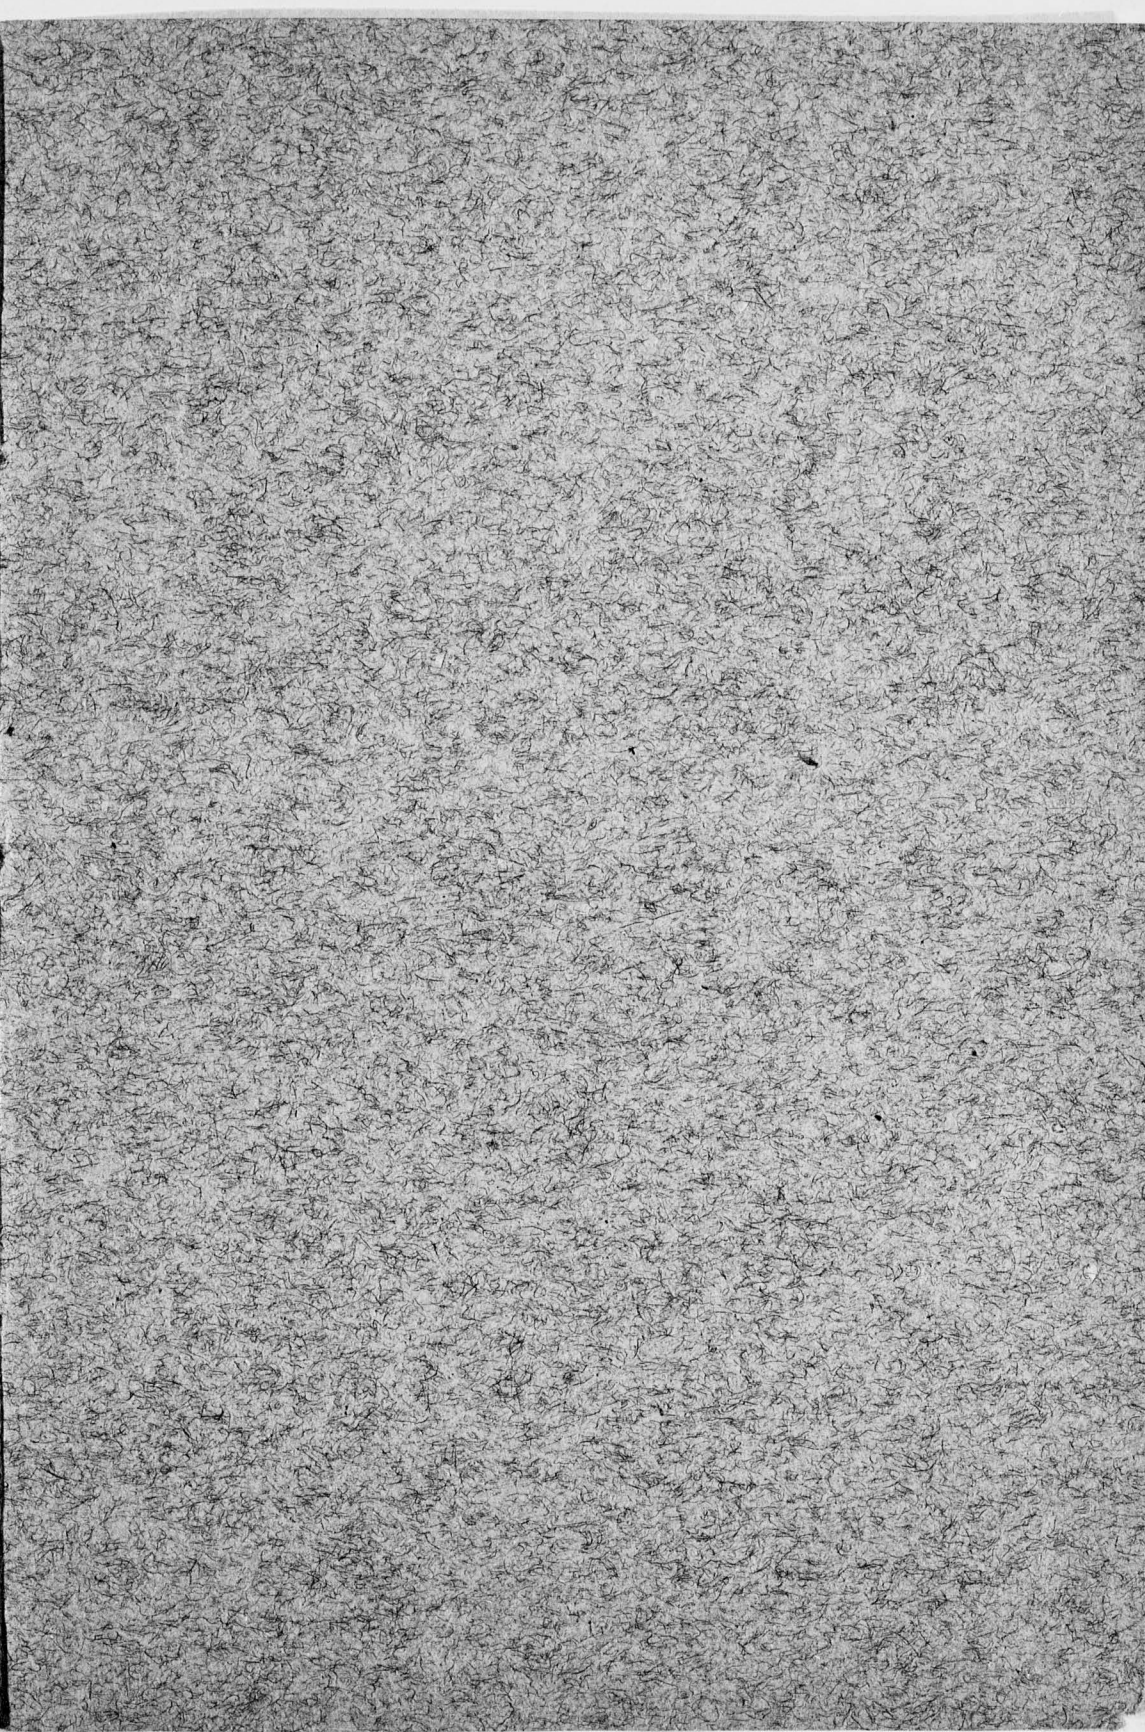

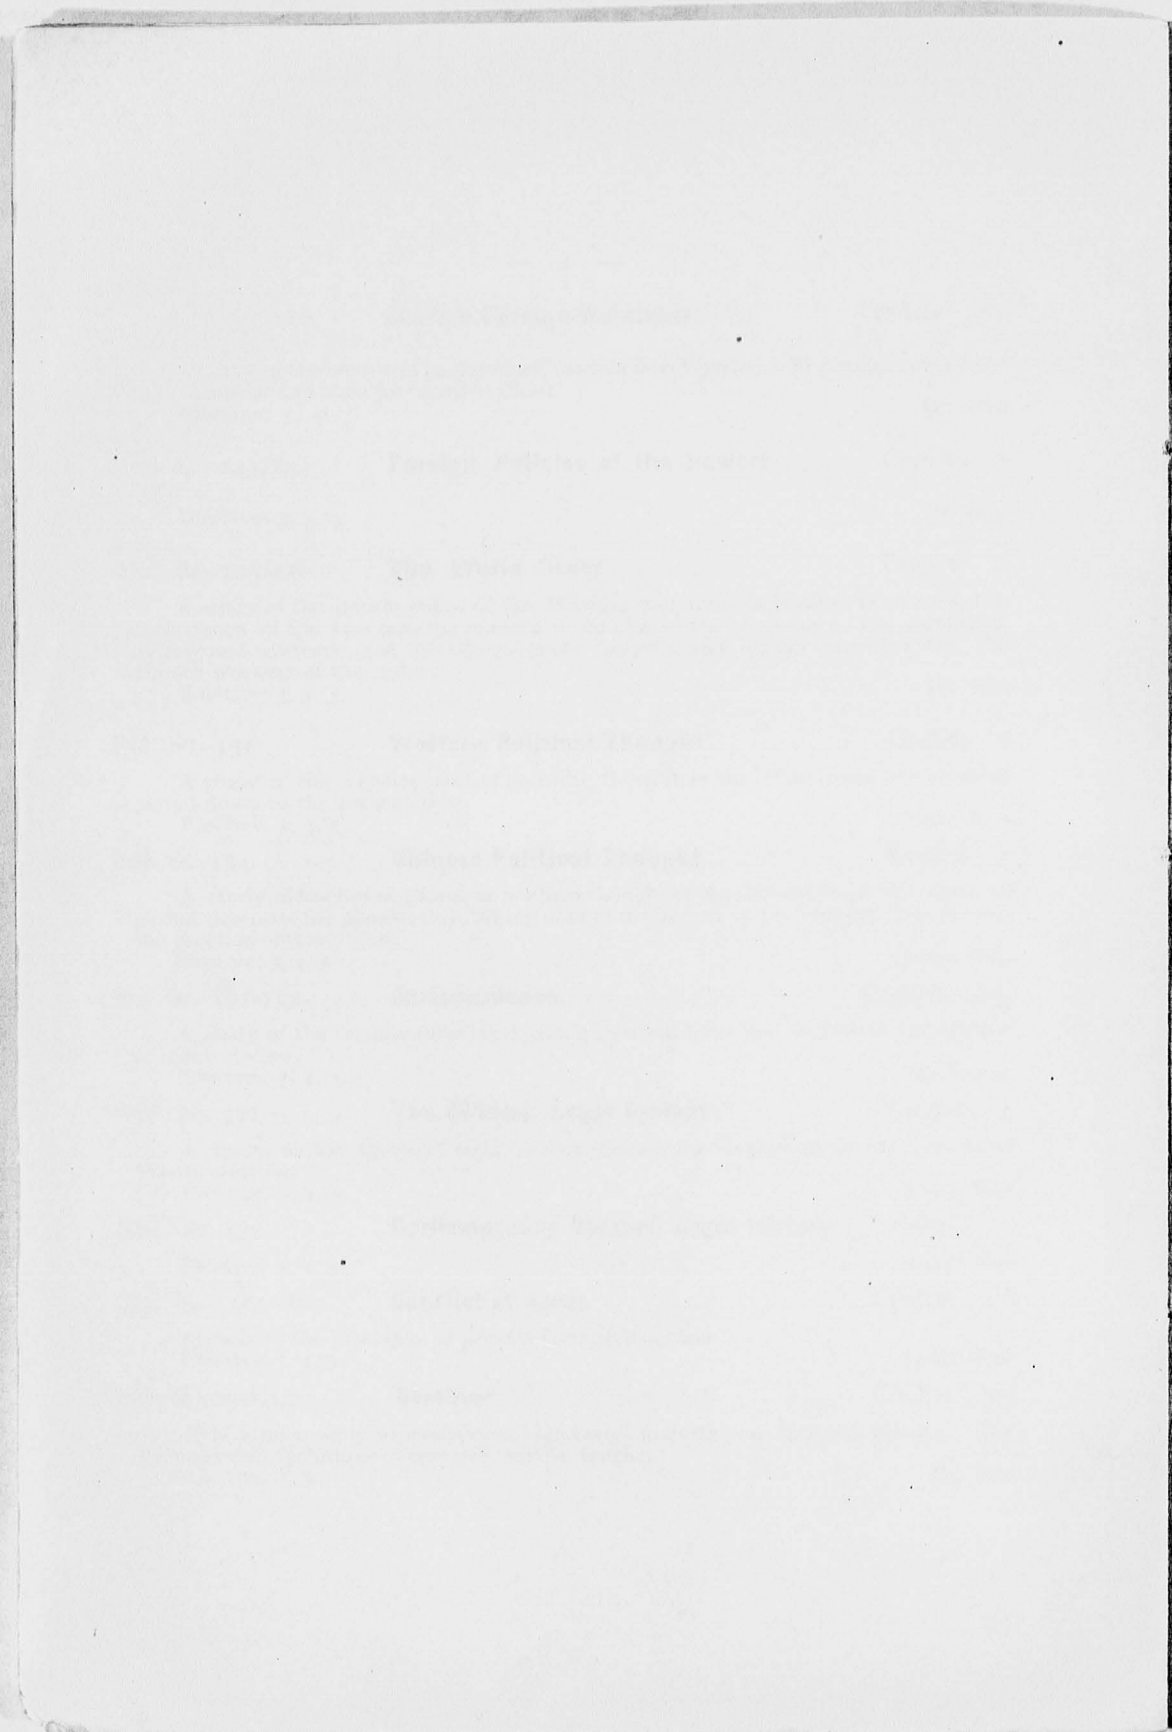

SPECIAL NOTICE

Under the plan of alternating the courses, those which are listed for the year 1926-27 may not be given again in the following year. Students are therefore reminded that, if they have a liking for a certain course, unless they elect it now, they may not have another opportunity to do so.

MAJOR CURRICULUM

A. Undergraduate

(effective 1928)

Students will be permitted to major in Political Science on entering the Senior Division when the following conditions are fulfilled:

- (a) That they have demonstrated an ability to express themselves in written Chinese and English to the satisfaction of the Department;
- (b) That they have met the language requirements prescribed by the University;
- (c) That they have taken—
 - (i) Courses in Political Science amounting to at least 12 points of credit;
 - (ii) Courses in natural science, preferably Psychology or Biology, amounting to 8 points of credit;
 - (iii) The special Freshmen course known as Contemporary Civilization;
 - (iv) The prerequisites, if any, for courses of such correlated subjects as they will elect in the Senior Division. For the said correlated subjects see below.

For the degree of Bachelor of Arts Political Science majors are required—

- (a) To submit an essay equivalent to a 4-credit course of study written under the supervision of the Department;

(b) To elect—

- (i) Courses in Political Science amounting to 40 to 48 points of credit;
- (ii) Courses in correlated subjects amounting to 16 to 24 points.

In making their program of study to meet the foregoing requirements, the students are advised to consult themselves as to which of the following lines of work they wish to prepare themselves for:

- (1) Political leadership (e.g., Parliamentary life)
- (2) Civil service
- (3) Diplomatic and consular service
- (4) Judicial service (See Ministry of Justice to the High Court of Kiangsi, Government Gazette, December 20, 1917)
- (5) Municipal service

They may then turn to the table below for general guidance:

B. Graduate

Graduate students who fulfill the following conditions may work for the degree of Master of Arts under the supervision of the Department of Political Science:

- (a) That they have an undergraduate record with merit-point credit to the value of 1:30;
- (b) That they have shown an ability to express themselves correctly and clearly in spoken and written Chinese and English.

- (c) That they have majored in Political Science as undergraduates or have elected enough courses offered by the Department as to indicate that they have sufficient preparation in the field.

Graduate students will be recommended for the degree when they have met the following requirements:

- (a) The minimum of one year's residence,
- (b) 18 credits in graduate courses,
- (c) A thesis of at least 5,000 words representing individual investigation and equivalent to a 6-credit graduate course of study.

The degree of Master of Arts is conferred upon the candidate whenever he meets all requirements. Should he desire to receive it in June, he should submit his thesis in proper form to the Chairman of the Committee on Graduate Studies on or before May first, and in draft to the professor in charge of his work one month earlier.

In selecting courses for their program of study, graduate students are advised to confine themselves as nearly as possible to one of the three groups into which courses of the Department of Political Science in the Senior Division are divided.

For the degree of Doctor of Philosophy students are referred to the regulations governing the question now being drafted.
